Surf's up!

THE FIRST CARMEL 'Surfabout' attracted 138 competitors to the beach over the weekend in what promoters hope will be an annual event. The setting sun cut the surfing competition short after 14 hours. Several events not completed will take place this Sunday (June 29). Results, a story and more pictures are on Page A11.

I began to notice the behavior of your teenagers when one of them backed his van on the wrong side of the street up to a stop sign and double-parked alongside a car full of girls. I waited for him to move, but he gave me a defiant look and I had to go into the wrong lane to get around. Then, when I was stopped again, by a girl this time, doubleparked on San Carlos, I began to notice.

I saw several young drivers roll through stop signs. I saw more double-parking, especially down on Scenic Road. Scenic was a mess around sunset. Some drive the 15 mph street at 30 mph. Some double- and triplepark, stopping traffic. Some play with footballs or frisbees as if it's a playground. I saw one football hit a moving car in the windshield. Some of them play their radios so loud it bothers people. An elderly couple almost got run down at the corner of 13th. I saw drivers with cans of beer, drinking while they drove. I'll bet I saw 50 lawbreakers in one hour, and in that hour I did not see one policeman.

It would be amusing to see those kids unable to drag themselves more than 50 feet away from their cars if it was not so troublesome for other people. They have no consideration for others. But my question is, where were the police?

Sea otters

Dear Editor:

We are profoundly grateful for the Army Corps of Engineers' carefully-considered decisions to deny PG&E a permit to expand its Moss Landing oil terminal — a decision which recognized the overwhelming public opposition to the project and the tremendous threat it posed to the sea otter.

The southern sea otter's extreme vulnerability to oil is the primary reason for its protection as a "threatened species" under the Endangered Species Act. Without the blubber layer which keeps other marine mammals warm, the otter relies on its thick fur to repel water and trap air against its skin. Once oiled, the fur loses its insulating ability; the animal chills and dies.

With a population of still fewer than 2,000 animals (Fish & Game's 1979 census estimated only 1,443 otters, down from 1,789 in 1976) and range only 200 miles long (with oil tanker ports at each end, and bracketed by the two largest nominated oil drilling tracts in OCS lease sale No. 53), the additional threat of a major spill from larger, foreign tankers entering Moss Landing posed an intolerable threat to the California sea otter population.

Monterey Bay Area citizens have long championed the beleaguered sea otters, and in defending these animals from the threat of a larger oil spill, they have also defended the quality of their own environment and the health of their economy.

Our heartfelt thanks to all who worked so tirelessly to prevent this peril from becoming a reality.

Thoughts on Eric Bell

Dear Editor:

I am sorry that Steve Hellman could not accept the fact Eric Bell's friends could have their own private grief and did not want fo discuss their grief with Steve because it was too personal to share with the public.

Adults have difficulty understanding suicide. How must it affect a sensitive 15-year-old when he feels that in some way he should have been able to keep it from happening?

It seems to me that Steve Hellman should continue to make Eric's memory worthwhile by investigating in depth the people who encourage youngsters in crime by pushing drugs and by buying from them goods which are obviously stolen. I doubt that Eric manufactured his own acid and I know he did not grow his own pot.

June 26, 1980

He might encourage school systems to stop setting up patterns for children who do not want to bother to attend school by encouraging supervised detention rather than suspension for truancy. How many 11- to 14-yearolds would continue to cut classes if they were sure that the reward would be extra school work plus an even longer day in school?

He should question a court system that cannot give swift, sure, appropriate rewards for antisocial behavior and that has been made helpless under present laws to assist before a crime has been committed.

He could find a way to publicize aspects of law enforcement such as the "ride along program," and encourage police departments to cooperate with parents and children in such a way that youngsters learn to respect peace of-

Help the police to protect children against theft, drug pushing and violence just as they would protect their parents.

And finally, he should try to do something about making good mental health counseling available to everyone who needs it, even though they are not wealthy or destitute. People whose incomes are in the middle will soon be poor if they try to get help.

We cannot undo Eric's death, but we must learn how to help other troubled children.

I commend Steve Hellman and your paper for the outstanding feature story on the dire tale of Eric Bell.

All too common in our society today, the tragedy is written with much insight into the circumstances.

Condemnation

Carmel

Dear Editor:

I was very upset with Steve Hellman's article in the June 12 issue on Eric Lynn Bell.

You made a very bad impression on people about Ray George in the article. It sounded like Mr. George spent 10 minutes with Eric and then decided it was hopeless. I know Ray George personally and know that he doesn't do things like that. He's a very special man, and I'm sure he spent several weeks trying his very best to help Eric.

Mrs. Marsha Bell is another special person. In your article you barely even mentioned her name. She has done so much for Eric, Craig and Neal, it's not even funny. She served as one of the top people in the Carmel Little League, and has tried to become as much of a mother as possible.

In the article you didn't mention that Nick Bell might have had very emotional feelings about the whole situation. The way you said that Mr. Bell didn't go to the funeral made it seem as if the man didn't even care.

In my mind, I had to write this letter to let you know that I felt that the article you wrote had no purpose, and if it did, you sure didn't do a very good job of conveying it.

I know you hurt a lot of people by writing the article.

Mary Smelser Pebble Beach

Steve Hellman responds:

I noted clearly in my story that Ray George worked with Eric and his family, but George said in the story he failed to find the answer.

Marsha Bell expessed many feelings about Eric, but they were not the only ones left out. Not included were the feelings of Eric's brother, Craig, Eric's closest friend, Eric's grandparents or the Juvenile Hall worker who found him dead.

There simply was not the space to tell the feelings of the many people who affected Eric's life.

Many people tried to help Eric at different points in his life; the point of my story is that they failed.

In the end, Eric felt alone, unwanted and useless.

Most important, Eric's thoughts were not included. He had feelings about his family, friends and society that we can only imagine.

His story could be a lesson for the living, for the parents and the people who are willing to learn from it.

As for Nick Bell not attending his son's funeral, Eric's death probably affected him more than anyone.

By AL EISNER

THE DECISION BY Superior Court Judge Richard Silver invalidating the Carmel Valley Master Plan has caused a great deal of confusion among county officials and residents.

A lot of people have problems threading their way through the legal thicket created by the historic decision which stated that the Board of Supervisors "abused its discretion" when it failed to order an Environmental Impact Report for the new Master Plan.

On Tuesday, the supervisors set a date for a public hearing to request an extension of the "moratorium" created by an interim ordinance banning subdivisions in Carmel Valley. The ordinance was adopted at the insistence of the state Office of Planning and Research, which chastised the county for approving projects despite the fact that the county does not have a valid General Plan.

So, the stage is set. The county will now have to go through the painstaking process of preparing an EIR for the Master Plan. That is expected to take until the end of this year.

(It would be tempting, at this point, to say, "I told you so." What the heck . . . I'll say it anyway. Here is what I wrote in this space Aug. 9, 1979: "Can the planners really believe their plan will not have any impact on the Valley, or that the potential impact of 50 percent growth in 20 years is not worth studying? Can they be that contemptuous of the planning process and of the gullibility of the good people of Carmel and Carmel Valley? The effects will be colossal . . . planning of this magnitute requires hard data . . . Planning for the next 20 years is a grave responsibility. If it takes a few more months to make certain that we are aware of the consequences of the result of growth of this magnitude envisioned in the Master Plan, let's do it. Let's insist on an EIR.")

TEXT OF A LETTER sent by the victorious attorneys retained by the City of Carmel in its suit against the county appears on Page 7 of this edition.

The lawyers spell out their concept of the matters that need to be reviewed in the EIR process.

They insist that close study is required to determine the effects of widening Carmel Valley Road; construction of a dam and sewers; permitting the building of resort hotels anywhere in the Valley, and providing for low and moderateincome housing.

County staff presented the supervisors with their own ideas at Tuesday's meeting, but the criteria were far less far-reaching. When I talked to a highranking county official Monday, he said he had not yet seen a copy of the letter. He was undoubtedly surprised when he finally did, I'm sure.

Because of the importance of the question, and the need for more public knowledge of the complex issues involved, we have reprinted the entire letter for our readers. Take the time to read it. The issues raised are critical. Our elected officials need to know whether the residents and taxpayers agree that we need to scrutinize the environmental questions that have been raised.

CALIFORNIA-AMERICAN Water Co. has been severely criticized for failing to realize that excessive pumping of its wells in Carmel Valley caused the water table to drop, killing vegetation along the river banks, including hundreds of trees.

"If you can't lick 'em, join 'em." Since the evidence of damage to river vegetation is so apparent and so overwhelming, Cal-Am now seems willing to admit it was at least partially at fault.

The new chairman of Cal-Am, C.M. "Pete" O'Day, submitted to an interview which will appear in next week's issue. O'Day admits openly that Cal-Am has made some serious mistakes. He also says that the water company wants to make amends, and become good neighbors. As part of that effort, it is sponsoring a series of workshops to study river bank vegetation and erosion.

It is a tentative first step. There will be a lot of skepticism about Cal-Am's motives, especially since the water company is seeking approval for four new wells in the lower Valley.

While I remain skeptical of Cal-Am—because of the sorry history of neglect—I think we ought to get as much participation in the workshops as possi-

Perhaps we ought to give Cal-Am a chance to prove its statement that the workshop series is "Cal-Am's commitment to a thorough cooperative search for effective solutions to water supply issues."

Now my hope is that people will remember the good things he did.

Sensationalism

Dear Editor:

Marriage, divorce, raising children, adolescence, drugs, the justice system, or simply the human personality; anyone of those is extremely complex.

However, life and its problems don't isolate them. Interwoven, the problems and solutions become increasingly complex.

How did Mr. Hellman think he could handle the life of Eric Bell built upon a handful of interviews? Filled with half-truths, inferences and omissions, it can only be labeled sensationalism. In my opinion, it was a cheap piece of journalism and not too different from the newspapers known for that. Some constructive ideas to help prevent future tragedies would have made sense. The newspaper failed in its responsibility to perform community service.

I sincerely hope that all of those involved, especially Eric's two younger brothers, will not suffer consequences from the article. Eric Bell's death was sad and needless. Perhaps we in the community can pay more attention to problems in our society and find ways to improve human relationships. Obviously, you wish to sell newspapers. I see no other reason for sensationalism.

> Katherine Winslow Carmel

Editor's Note:

The story of Eric Bell was presented in a very unsensational manner.

Constructive ideas are not the job of news stories. If a news story prompts people to think about solutions to problems presented in that story, the story has done a big part of its job.

The other part of a news story's job is to inform.

Sad and tragic

Eric Bell's death was sad and tragic indeed. I must believe that your article was motivated by shock at the circumstances and that it was an appeal for community and institutional support for troubled young peo-

It is, however, simplistic and distorted. It does not contribute to understanding a complex human problem. It is irresponsible reporting about facts of Eric's family life. It is insensitive to the privacy and grief of the Bell family.

Ambulances

Dear Editor:

There have been repeated misunderstandings regarding the Carmel Red Cross participation in the various ambulance programs in which we are involved.

For the record, I would like to restate our position with the three ambulances which we support.

1. Carmel Valley ambulance is housed in Carmel Valley Fire Station and covers an area from Garland Park to beyond the Carmel Valley Village. This ambulance is manned by paid staff and volunteers. If it is decided that the paid staff is cut by the action of the voters, then the members of the Fire Department must decide whether or not the volunteers alone can continue the Red Cross ambulance service.

Whether this service will be continued or not is presently under serious consideration. If you wish the service to continue, please make your wishes known to the Fire Department representives.

2. The Big Sur ambulance continues, as in the past, totally staffed by volunteers.

3. The City of Carmel ambulance also continues, as in the past, with response from volunteers.

4. The ambulance in Mid-Valley, which covers an area from San Carlos Road to Garland Park has no connection with Red Cross and is staffed by members of the Mid-Valley Fire Station.

More on user fees

Dear Editor:

It is unfortunate that Walter Maiersperger. in his letter to the editor June 19 issue, chose to alienate volunteer firefighters in his tirade against the user fee for fire protection.

He overlooks the serious need for trained firefighters and medical technicians to be on duty continuously. They insure immediate response to a fire or medical emergency. They provide professional guidance at the scene, which is followed up by volunteers.

The training of volunteers, and preplanning for all emergencies, is primarily the responsibility of the paid staff. Their expertise makes the volunteer more confident and effective. Their presence is necessary and appreciated.

Additionally, I suggest Mr. Maiersperger familiarize himself with the Monterey County ruling on any new ad-valorem tax after Proposition 13. I challenge him to submit a more equitable user fée formula.

The Mayor's report:

I WILL USE my allotted space for this week's report to present to the residents of Carmel for their consideration a proposal for the use of city property and "in-lieu" parking fee money for combined parking and housing for the elderly on limited income.

After discussing the matter with our city attorney, Mr. Brehmer, I was informed that structures used for that purpose must be approved by the voters. I have one particular parcel of land in mind at the moment which is the lot the city purchased last year on the west side of Dolores Street between Fourth and Fifth.

I am proposing the use of the property with a two-fold purpose. The city would build an underground parking garage for about 16 cars which would be rented on a monthly basis to business people. About 22 apartments for local old people could be constructed above the garage.

One prerequisite for rental of the apartments would be that occupants do not own an automobile, thereby allowing all of the parking for others.

To continue with the proposal — after the city builds the garage the area above would be "air leased" to a nonprofit organization which would build and operate apartments specifically for elderly residents with limited incomes. The city would not be involved in building or renting apartments in any way.

To continue, the lease would be based on an equitable economic basis (about 50 years) and at that time the total improvements would revert to the city.

This is one proposal I have for using

"in-lieu" money that the city holds. I'll soon present to you two additional possibilities to consider for use of the "in lieu" funds.

It would be very helpful to know the general feeling of the residents as to the proposed plan. If the results are in favor, the proposal would be placed on the November ballot.

An indication of your feelings regarding this matter would be very helpful, and I would appreciate your presence at the next City Council meeting July 7 to express your concerns. The meeting will be our first to open at 7:30 p.m. Please be there. Thank you.

I'll close by quoting John Morrison, who said: "Knowledge comes by taking things apart; wisdom comes from putting things together."

$4.4 million temporary budget OK'd

By BOB BATES

THE CARMEL CITY COUNCIL approved a $4,470,000 request by the city administrator for "normal operating expenditures," almost without deliberation, at its special meeting Tuesday.

The figure reflects preliminary estimates for the 1980-81 budget, and can be modified by the passage of a budget ordinance.

The final version of the new city budget will be presented to the City Council in mid to late July, according to City Administrator Douglas Peterson.

The council action Tuesday was advertised as a "resolution authorizing normal operating expenditures" on the council agen-

Peterson said that no capital expenditures or major projects are authorized to be paid for by the funds.

Only Councilwoman Helen Arnold questioned Peterson on the resolution.

"Is this how this is usually done?" Mrs. Arnold asked.

"The budget is usually ready in late August," Peterson responded.

Council approval on the measure was unanimous.

The funds will be taken from three sources: the General Fund ($3,200,000) hostelry tax ($1,200,000) and gas taxes ($70,000).

IN OTHER council business:

 During an executive session, the council instructed City Attorney George Brehmer and city staff to begin negotiations for the acquisition of property for an annex for Harrison Memorial Library.

The two lots proposed for the library annex are on Lincoln and Sixth, next to the library parking lot.

· Brehmer was also directed to begin condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of Piccadilly Nursery on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh if negotiations between the city and owners of the property do not result in a satisfactory sale price soon.

Owners are asking $400,000 for the 40 by 100 foot lot.

'In-lieu' parking fee reduced back to $13,500

I HE CONTROVERSIAL $31,000-a-space "in-lieu" parking fee established by the City Council June 9 was rescinded by the council at a special meeting Tuesday,

In-lieu fees allow builders to pay the city for required parking spaces they don't provide. The city is to use the money for parking lots or garages. The fee had been $13,500 until

Council indecision on the issue arose after a proposal was four building projects under consideration from the $31,000 fee for 180 days.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said the enactment of the $31,000-a-space fee was a back-door approach to placing a moratorium on the sale of in-lieu parking by the city.

"If we are going to place a moratorium on in-lieu parking, let's be honest about it and say that is what we are doing," she

Councilman Howard Brunn said the $31,000 fee was unfair to people who have invested months of planning for their developments and that they should not pay it.

Melvin Kline of Carmel, who has submitted plans for the construction of an apartment complex on Junipero, said the $31,000 fee was discriminatory and would discourage

Carmel architect Olof Dahlstrand also opposed the $31,000 fee, indicating it would tend to inflate land values, making it impossible for some people to buy land here.

Ultimately, the council voted to reinstate the $13,500 charged for an in-lieu parking space and to refer the entire matter back to the Planning Commission for study.

The council stipulated that planners return to the council within 60 days a recommendation on the appropriate fee based on the cost of providing a parking space.

The County:

Work started on new Valley EIR

By JOANNE HODGEN

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday, June 24, to start work on a new Environmental Impact Report for the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The action followed Monterey Superior Court Judge Richard Silver's ruling that the Master Plan was improperly adopted by the supervisors Jan. 15. The recent decision came on a suit filed by the City of Carmel and Virginia Merz of Carmel. A report submitted by the county Planning Department to the supervisors called for a "focused" EIR to determine the impact of development on Carmel Valley over the next 20 years. Silver said in his decision that other EIRs on specific projects in the Valley do not provide a coherent document prepared under the policies of the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan, and "did not assess environmental concerns from a cumulative position."

The Master Plan called for construction of a maximum of 2,500 housing units by the year 2000.

The Planning Department recommended that the EIR to be prepared focus on the following:

Potential erosion problems on areas designated as developable and along the Carmel River. Potential runoff water quality problems in the Valley to assure that they develop as predicted. Impact on the Carmel Valley aguifer if all 2,500 housing units are built. Expected increase in runoff and what that means for stream levels.

 ✓ The location and impact on rare and endangered species in the areas of development concentration.

✓ The impact of 2,500 housing units on Carmel River Lagoon.

Access, traffic volume and flow.

✓ If 2,500 housing units would create a critical air quality

Refer to Carmel Sanitary District plans for Carmel Valley, package treatment options and master and individual septic tanks.

Potential energy consumption in Carmel Valley in the year 2000.

The impact on archaeological sites and historical sites if 2,500 housing units are built.

The cumulative impact expected at the end of the 20-year planning period.

THERE WAS SOME DISAGREEMENT between Alexander "Zan" Henson, representing the City of Carmel, and the supervisors over the way in which the EIR will be prepared.

Instead of focusing the EIR on the 2,500 housing units to be allowed under the Master Plan, Henson said the EIR should focus on standards for traffic, air quality, water quality and noise that the community wants Carmel Valley to attain in 20 years.

In a letter submitted to the supervisors, Henson said that once the environmental standards are determined, "then one could work backward to establish a growth rate that would achieve those standards."

Speaking to the supervisors, Henson said by setting standards, it can be determined if 2,500 housing units will create environmental problems. He said, "Consider what noise level would be in 20 years with 2,000 units, 1,500 units."

Standards could alleviate problems encountered by setting 2,500 units as a maximum figure, he said. "There is a very significant danger lurking in that approach."

DEFENDING the figures in the Master Plan, Supervisor Sam Farr said the 2,500-unit figure was established after long debate by the Carmel Valley Citizen Advisory Committee.

"What they were trying to do is put a limit on the number of lots to be created," he said. "Whether the lots will be used can't be determined by the Master Plan."

Henson countered that it must be assumed that when a lot is created there is going to be construction soon.

Henson also expressed Carmel's request to include the proposed intersection of Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon Roads in the EIR.

Henson also objected to limiting the EIR studies to rare and endangered species in areas of development concentration. The effects of development to plant and animal life, he said. should not be limited to concentrated areas. The impact studies should be expanded to encompass a larger area, he planner, said he is concerned that a Master Plan and EIR "ofsuch scope will be an academic exercise, will prove to be impractical unless parameters are set."

He said an agreement must be reached with the City of Carmel, "Otherwise we feel we'll be here arguing every detail in a legal format."

Because of Carmel's financial capability, the Master Plan battle could go on indefinitely, he said. Bordonaro also requested that specific plans continue to be heard. (A moratorium against Carmel Valley construction is expected to be adopted by the supervisors July 8 that would preclude hearings on Specific Plans.)

Specific Plans, he said, analyze development projects in more depth and contain more facts needed for planning issues.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos, who acted on behalf of the county in the Master Plan suit, asked the board if it wanted to establish alternatives to EIR issues addressed in the Master Plan or whether a consultant should "find those alternatives himself."

Farr responded that the issue is not the EIR. "The issue is, will we have a plan to follow in the future?"

Protesting the standards demanded by Henson, Farr said, "I think it is going to be impossible to get that near to the

However, Supervisor Dusan Petrovic said it bothered him that 20 percent of the housing quota belongs to one developer (Carmel Valley Ranch). "A wrong plan is worse than no plan," he insisted.

Based on the initial study, the EIR will take six to eight months to prepare, according to Lynne Mounday, senior planner in the Planning Department's environmental section.

It will take about a month for a consultant to be chosen before the EIR can be started, he said.

EVEN THOSE OF US who feel "smug" in our being "good parents" can profit from Steve Hellman's story last week, if we read and re-read it.

There is always something to be learned and to be improved, and none of us is immune to improvement. Let us hope that good will come from this tragedy.

IT IS TOTALLY INCREDIBLE to me that the City Council has raised the in-lieu parking fees to $31,000.

The "something that has got to be done" is certainly not that, but decisions and action.

And just why is the Sunset Center field dead? Can anyone in his right mind say that the present dust bowl must be preserved? What a charming vista the present field is - 200 cars, dirt and a hazard at night. Do we have any traffic jams now? Why should there be any in the future?

Why do I say it's a hazard at night? Because I have personally seen, too many times, it become a drag-race strip. Worse, some times a few teenagers have been down there throwing a ball around and suddenly they have been attacked by one or more cars. I mean attacked! The cars have come down the drive, at top speed, chasing the young people, who were literally running for their lives, and the dust was so churned up that I couldn't get any license numbers.

That was not a single happening. Does that kind of situation need to be preserved?

IT HAS BEEN STATED by an architect, that a two-level garage— with a park, trees, playground and ball area on top - would be three feet below the sidewalk level of the San Carlos and Eighth corner.

I just do not understand the so-called "dismay" at that proposal.

BACK TO in-lieu parking fees.

By that monstrous move of the City Council, the possibility of any construction of moderate-income housing in the city that is so desperately needed has been eliminated.

Consider for example that someone wishes to build six studio apartments. A studio apartment "in-lieu" fee is 1/2 a space: For six apartments, that would be three fees, or $93,000, right smack up front, which would increase the cost of each apartment, over and above the construction, by $15,500, or $1,292 a month for a year, or $322.92 a month over four years.

All of which boils down to a $350-a-month apartment having to rent for $672.92 a month for the owner to break even. No profit, just break even.

Is that realistic? Is that responsible?

In-lieu parking was meant to be used by the city to provide parking where it was not feasible for the property owner to provide his own (by space limitations, location or lot size).

I haven't seen the city provide anything but perpetual piddling around.

SPEAKING OF PIDDLING AROUND, let me ask one question of all of you.

Planners won't play Solomon for builder's baby

By BOB BATES

AN ANGRY GROUP of business people converged on the Carmel Planning Commission at its meeting June 18, demanding to be heard about a proposed two-story commercial/apartment building at the Court of the Golden Bough at Ocean and Monte Verde.

Ben Enea, owner of Sade's, a restaurant/bar on Ocean, submitted an application for final commission approval of his design for a structure planned for the interior of the court, which is open space for a number of other businesses in the complex.

Lloyd Beilby, owner of the Spinning Wheel Inn Motel at Ocean and Monte Verde, demanded that he be heard before the commission acted on Enea's application.

Chairman Robert Stephenson told Beilby the meeting was not a public hearing and that it was the duty of the commission merely to act on the application.

Angry shouts from the audience of about 20 prompted Stephenson to ask the commission to open the meeting for a public hearing.

Although at least two commission members—Sandy Swain and John Logan—were sympathetic with some of the concerns expressed by the business people, the meeting was not opened for public hearing.

The business people said they are concerned about the effect construction of Enea's building will have on deliveries and utilities.

Beilby said he is concerned about parking for his motel—already burdened with cars from non-guests—and congestion that an additional business at the court would create. He said he has five parking spaces for seven rental units.

"This is a civil matter," Stephenson said. "I suggest you contact your attorneys or check your deeds to see what your rights are in the matter."

"ARE YOU just going to plop a building down there without a public hearing?" a woman shouted from the audience.

"Where is your consideration for people?" another asked.

"As I said, this is a civil matter and it is not the function of the Planning Commission to settle disputes between individuals," Stephenson responded.

After the design for the building—presented by Monterey architect Wade Reese—was approved, the business people reassembled outside City Hall and questioned city Building Inspector Ron Warren.

"I am going to suggest that the city buy the property and turn it into a mini-park," Beilby said.

Warren told the group that Planning Commission approval of the design was not approval of a building permit application.

Warren suggested that the dissident business people talk

'Are you just going to plop a building down there without a public hearing?'

with Enea or his architect before taking legal action to halt construction.

"I'm not talking to anybody but my attorney," one man said as he walked away from the group.

Architect Reese told the Pine Cone he had contacted all owners of surrounding property about Enea's plan, and only two absentee landlords had replied.

"We are willing to talk with the owners about arranging our hours of construction either before or after peak business hours, but no one seems to want to talk with us about it with the exception of one restaurant owner," he said.

Planning Commission may discuss reorganization again

A SPECIAL meeting of the Carmel Planning Commission has been called for 4 p.m. July 2. It was requested by Planning Director Robert Griggs, who suggested that the possible reorganization of the commission and "in-lieu parking" be on the agenda.

Griggs made the request during the Planning Commission meeting June 18.

A second regular commission meeting will also be held the fourth Wednesday of each month to discuss longrange planning and the Carmel General Plan. Those meetings will be at 4 p.m. in City Council chambers.

The possibility of creating a public hearing for those meetings will be discussed.

IN OTHER commission action June 18:

A new store front design

submitted by Vance Killen was approved for Postergraphics on Ocean and Seventh. Commissioners asked that the words "posters, posters, posters" be removed from the front of the building. The applicant agreed.

• The design of a masonry fence submitted by Ward Cramer for a lot on the west side of Scenic between Ocean and Eighth was approved.

• Commissioners denied a request from Nicolas Deroche for Jack London clothing for a new awning at San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth.

• An application for a sign by Feriozzi of Rome on the west side of San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth was approved after the applicant agreed to change the sign from rectangular to oval.

• A sign for Carmel Stamp

Shop on the west side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh was approved.

• Two sign applications for the Jack London store were approved. An application for a display case was denied.

• The resubmission of an application for a sign for Fabulous Things on the east side of San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh was withdrawn.

• The resubmission of two sign applications by The Marshall Group on the southwest corner of Ocean and Lincoln was approved after the applicant, Richard Marshall, agreed to make smaller signs.

Commissioners John Logan and James Wright were appointed by Chairman Robert Stephenson to represent the commission on a committee that will select a consultant to compile the new Carmel General Plan.

Also serving on that committee will be two City Council members, the city administrator and the planning director.

Business is down, mayor says

ALTHOUGH GROSS SALES TAX receipts for January through March in Carmel are up 21 percent from last year, ($215,000 vs. $176,000) indications are that business is in a downturn here, according to Mayor Barney Laiolo.

"The increase in sales does not reflect the inflationary spiral or increases in the cost of living in that time," he said.

"It will be interesting to see what the figures will be for the second quarter (April through June).

"At least two stores have closed their doors here since the beginning of the year" due to rising operational costs.

Packaged liquor was the least sold item in Carmel during the first quarter, while clothing outsold all other consumer goods, Laiolo said.

Gifts and specialty items garnered more gross income than restaurants, he added.

The city receives a one percent sales tax from local businesses. Hostelry tax, which is eight percent, is a separate tax source.

How much 'city' will CV accept?

Supervisors are challenged

"How MUCH AIR POLLUTION, traffic, water contamination, loss of wildlife habitat and uncertainty over water supply are the inhabitants of Carmel Valley willing to accept?"

That question is posed in a June 19 letter to the Board of Supervisors from three attorneys representing the City of Carmel and others.

Carmel City Attorney George Brehmer and lawyers Richard Rosenthal and Alexander Henson wrote the letter to guide the supervisors when they begin preparing an Environmental Impact Report for the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver decided June 6 in favor of the City of Carmel in its suit to force the county to file an EIR for the new Master Plan. The action stalled implementation of the plan, which calls for 50 percent growth in Carmel Valley in the next 20 years.

The letter continues: "The . . . function of the EIR for the Master Plan is, of course, to identify the cumulative impacts of the growth provided in the Master Plan. In this regard," the letter continues, "the prosaic methodology would be to select some arbitrary number of units and analyze the impact of same on the various environmental parameters.

"A preferable, or at least more visionary approach would be to first envision how the community wants Carmel Valley to be in 20 years," the letter states.

Henson, who was hired by the City of Carmel to represent it because of his former employment with the environmental section of state attorney general's office, told this newspaper that the letter represented "constructive suggestions and criticism by concerned citizens," and that it was not necessarily meant to be an outline of action demanded by the city after it won its lawsuit.

"Any citizen can do the same," Henson said, "although they might pay a little more attention to us because we did win the lawsuit."

County officials have estimated they will be able to prepare an EIR for the Master Plan before the end of the year. That will require another extension from the State Office of Planning and Research, which granted more time to the county to bring its General Plan into conformance with state law. The original one-year extension, which halted development in Carmel Valley until a new Master Plan was adopted, was granted in October 1979.

Among other areas of concern listed in the letter to the county are protection of the rural character of Carmel Valley. the impact of widening Carmel Valley Road to four lanes, construction of a dam and a sewer line in Carmel Valley, permitting resort hotels to be built anywhere in the Valley, incorporating the Odello property in the Area of Development Concentration, Rancho Canada Lodge, provision for low- and moderate-income housing and the impact "on Robinson Canyon environs of constructing a $1 million intersection . . . on Carmel Valley Road."

The document notes the "Master Plan as adopted incorporated the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan. However, evidently the question of the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Robinson Canyon Road and traffic thereon has not been examined. What are the environmental impacts—particularly/growth-inducing impacts—on Robinson Canyon, of building the intersection?

"Further, does the EIR for the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan discuss the cumulative impact of 400 or 500 homes with regard to sewage and water supply as it is presently proposed?" the letter continues.

"Inasmuch as under the proposed 2,500 units (in the Carmel Valley Master Plan) the Ranch represents about 20 percent, the cumulative effect of this one project in relation to the whole plan ought to be addressed."

The Board of Supervisors had copies of the letter for study before its meeting Tuesday when it was scheduled to ask for an extension of the interim ordinance to continue the ban on subdivision approvals in Carmel Valley until the Master Plan is finally adopted.

Text of the letter on EIR and Master Plan

The following letter, dated June 19, is from lawyer Alexander T. Henson and others to Michal Moore, chairman of the county Board of Supervisors:

Honorable Chairman Moore:

The following comments concerning the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the EIR therefore are submitted to ensure that pursuant to the mandate of the California Supreme Court, "It must be apparent that in serving the policy of CEQA it is necessary to secure all conflicting views prior to preparation of even a draft EIR."

The predominant function of the EIR for the Master Plan is, of course, to identify the cumulative impacts of the growth provided in the Master Plan. In this regard the prosaic methodology would be to select some arbitrary number of units and analyze the impact of same on the various environmental parameters.

However, a preferable, or at least more visionary approach would be to first envision how the community wants Carmel Valley to be in 20 years. How much air pollution, traffic, traffic noise, water contamination, loss of wildlife habitat and uncertainty over water supply are the inhabitants of the Valley willing to accept?

We know that as development occurs the existing standards will be compromised, but how much is too much? These standards should be fairly easy to deduce: the clarion voice of the residents of the Valley has indicated the rural character of the Valley must be preserved. Thus the benchmark for any environmental standard is its impact on the rural character of the Valley, e.g. traffic level "F" does not seem consistent with any notion of a rural atmosphere, nor does a noise contour of 65 dba, etc.

Once these environmental standards are discerned, or more appropriately proposed by the planning staff using the guiding light of protecting the rural character of the Valley as their criteria, then one could work backward to establish a growth rate that would achieve those standards. Obviously, technological changes or public facility investment could alter that growth rate.

For example, the enlargement of Carmel Valley Road to four lanes will increase the traffic capacity, the construction of dams on the Carmel River will increase the available water supply, the construction of a sewer line up Carmel Valley will alleviate groundwater contamination. Consequently, a growth rate or density under the existing plan and allocation system could be created, but with the recognition that with a momentous public infrastructure investment, the planned growth rate could and ought to be increased to reflect such investment. (This assumes, of course, that other changes can be made to accommodate the increased growth. It is hardly consistent to pay for sewering the valley and to construct a four-lane road if the noise level will become 75 dba across the Valley and smog will become prevalent.)

Under such an analysis the weakest environmental link would thus become the limiting factor for growth, at least until such limitation was either overcome technologically or the political decision was made to relax that standard.

Finally, it is clear that this analysis uses the existing Master Plan intact with the growth allocation system. It simply starts the analsis with the quality of life the community wants in 20 years and works backward to a density figure rather than having an arbitrary growth rate, e.g. 2.5 percent, dictate the quality of life the community must accept. (The board ought to be chary of any arbitrary growth rate as it might induce business expectations that cannot be accomplished because of environmental constraints, e.g. it begs credulity to think the board would approve further subdivision if the aquifer became seriously contaminated by septic effluent.)

Before concluding, mention must be made of several specific components of the Master Plan as amended that must be addressed in the EIR for the plan. Those would include the prospective densities for agricultural lands and areas of biological significance, permitting resort hotels to be built anywhere in the Valley, incorporating the Odello property into the area of development concentration, the impact on Robinson Canyon environs of constructing a $1 million intersection or a permutation thereof, on Carmel Valley Road, the provisions for low- and moderate-income housing and the Rancho Canada Lodge.

With regard to agricultural lands and areas of biological significance, it is hard to understand why a density of one unit per two acres is permissible, albeit with clustering, when the rest of the Valley is 2-1/2 acres. As to the proposed "low density" for areas of biological significance, that is not a permissible legal standard. (Every district shown on the plan should have a standard of population density and building intensity. "Low density" is too vague to be such a standard.)

The cumulative impact of permitting resort hotels to be built anywhere in the Valley "consistent with the surrounding" architecture and neighborhood is significant but hard to address. Exactly how will such a determination be made? Can any landowner in the Valley be confident that Marriott cannot put a resort hotel next door? Will such decisions be transferred from the General Plan process and instead be in the zoning?

How will the determination be made that such zoning is consistent with the General Plan?

While the full impacts of putting the Odello property into the area of development concentration cannot be known until the Odello Specific Plan is more discernible, changing its status from agricultural will have both specific and cumulative impacts. While a crystal ball inquiry is not necessary, some estimation of environmental impacts is.

The Master Plan as adopted incorporated the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan. However, evidently the question of the intersection with Carmel Valley Road and Robinson Canyon Road and traffic thereon has not been examined. What are the environmental impacts, particularly growth inducing impacts, on Robinson Canyon, of building a $1 million intersection or some variation thereof? Further, does the EIR for the Carmel Valley Ranch Specific Plan discuss the cumulative impact of 400 or 500 homes with regard to sewage and water supply as it is presently proposed? The sewage issue is particularly acute since the county public health officer has raised the spectre that there may already be some sewage contamination of the

At the present time do we know that the Carmel Valley Ranch will not contribute to further contamination? Inasmuch as under the proposed 2,500 units the ranch represents about 20 percent, the cumulative impact of this one project in relation to the whole plan ought to be addressed.

The vague and incomplete manner in which the proposed plan addresses low- and moderate-income housing was highlighted by the recent decision of the Planning Commission on the Holt Ranch application. What are the limits, if any, on density bonuses for such housing? How will in-lieu fees help preserve the socio-economic diversity of the Valley unless such fees are used in Carmel Valley? Which, if any, standards in the plan will be relaxed for low- and moderate-income housing?

Mention must also be made of the Rancho Canada Lodge and its cumulative environmental impact. While there is a lawsuit pending which seeks to set aside the approval of that project, given the judicial process, it may be some time before this issue is finally decided. Thus the EIR ought to address this project and its interrelationship with the rest of the plan.

While addressing interrelationships, the EIR also ought to pecifically address the interrelationship of traffic in the Valley and its impact on surrounding communities, most notably Carmel. Recognition must be given to the bottleneck of Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1.

Unless and until the Hatton Canyon Freeway is built or some alternative thereto, traffic will be disrupted at the abovementioned intersection with resulting impact on city traffic in Carmel. Some analysis of the extent of this problem and alternatives to mitigate the problem should be in the EIR.

The county's response to the above questions and points is eagerly awaited. Thank you for your consideration of the foregoing.

Sincerely. Alexander T. Henson George W. Brehmer Richard H. Rosenthal

She's found a way to health and fitness

Text and Photos By ALAN McEWEN

The search for a good type of exercise led to an unusual one for Kathleen Atkinson, 28, of Carmel.

A registered nurse with an 18-month-old son, she started lifting weights and was crowned "Miss Western America 1980" at the Western America Bodybuilding Championships in Oakland June 14. She has found weight-lifting and body-building to be the ideal exercise for her.

"I wanted to feel good," she said. "I started seeing the changes."

She has been lifting weights at the Sunset Center gym in Carmel for just a year and has become enthusiastic about the results. Standing 5-3 and weighing 104 pounds, she appears very fit and healthy.

"I feel better about myself," she said. When training for a contest such as the one in Oakland, she is busy at the gym 21/2-hours a day, five days a week.

"It takes a special person to sustain the energy and diet," her trainer George DuBets (shown with her in one photo) noted. "It's hard training."

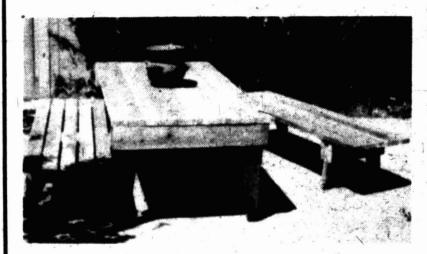

DuBets organized the Sunset Center gym program seven years ago, and now supervises 25 to 40 men and women who work out in the gym each week. DuBets said that some women try fad exercises, but become disillusioned when they don't get results.

"Results come from a disciplined, structured program," he said.

The results for Mrs. Atkinson are apparent in her sunny outlook and good health. And besides, she says, "I enjoy lifting weights."

Variance denied to reduce spaces for apartment parking

THE CARMEL BOARD OF AD-JUSTMENTS has denied a variance for Melvin Kline to reduce by two parking spaces the number required for the construction of an apartment building on Junipero between Fifth and Sixth.

The action came at a board meeting June

Kline said that to provide parking spaces would represent a hardship on the land.

If Kline is required to provide "in-lieu parking" spaces it will cost him $62,000, since the City Council raised the price of an in-lieu parking space from $13,750 to $31,000 June 9.

In other action, the board:

• Approved a use permit for Viola Wise to retain plumbing fixtures in a home on the southeast corner of Santa Rita and Third.

The plumbing fixtures include a sink that was previously used in a darkroom. The variance was granted with the condition that the sink be removed if the basement where it is located is converted to a living area.

• A use permit to allow construction of a fence not to exceed eight feet in height was granted to Arthur Mertens at the southwest corner of Ocean and Camino Real.

Mertens, who is on the Planning Commission, stepped down while the matter was being considered by fellow commissioners.

• Approved a use permit for Gatja Rothe to build a fence at the west side of San Antonio between Ninth and 10th.

 Denied a variance for M. Gustafson for a reduction in the front yard setback for construction of a deck on a home at the southeast corner of Forest and Eighth.

 Denied a variance to allow a subdivision into two single-family residential bulding sites at the west side of Ladera Road off Rio

The application was made by Louise Shaw, owner of the property. Jack Martin of Carmel Realty presented drawings of the proposed subdivision and argued that other parcels in the area were already smaller than the Shaw property.

The board declined the application due to drainage and other complications.

Martin said the public might think there was a conflict of interest in the denial since the city offered to buy the property at one time for $20,000.

• Denied a variance to Thomas Sweeney for an in-lieu parking space on a lot on Dolores between Seventh and Eighth.

• Denied a variance to Cambridge Court Investments to allow an existing structure (a water heater enclosure) to remain in the back vard setback of a home on the east side of Santa Fe between First and Second.

 Approved a variance to Arthur Hovanitz to allow the reduction in the size of a back yard setback to expand a single-family residence on the west side of Carpenter between Fifth and Sixth.

Young vs. old leads to conflicts at beach

By BOB BATES

CONFLICTS BETWEEN youths and older residents about the use of Carmel Beach are the source of many complaints to city officials.

Police are often called to investigate complaints concerning the behavior of youths — young adults and juveniles — along Scenic Drive, near the beach.

The complexity of the problem goes beyond mere enforcement, although a shortage of policemen in Carmel limits the Police Department's ability to adequately patrol the beach area, according to police Capt. Bob Fisher.

"I am not saying the beach is ever unsafe. There are incidents of drinking and some minor drug offenses," Fisher

"The majority of complaints deals with large crowds that gather, abusiveness toward the general public and parking problems resulting from that."

Most of the complaints come from residents along the oceanfront, Fisher said.

City Forestry Commissioner Sinclair Kerby-Miller said that timing plays a large role in some of the complaints older residents make about young people at the beach.

"Older people are just going to have to adjust to the fact that the young people use the beach at certain hours of the day," he said, "usually after school or on weekends.

"The young should be able to use the beach. It is a wonderful place for them to get together."

Easy access to the beach is also of primary importance,

Kerby-Miller said, in discouraging people from walking down

"It takes the sand away from the roots of trees and eventually away from the roadway," he said.

City Administrator Douglas Peterson said provisions for a scenic walk will be included in the new city budget.

"It would be irresponsible to become involved in such a complex project without looking at the entire thing," Peterson said. "The public should also be consulted."

Parking and speeding problems along Scenic Drive, accessibility to emergency vehicles and aesthetics all must be taken into consideration, Peterson said.

Removal of parking places along Scenic may eventually become necessary, he said.

City Councilman Frank Lloyd, a naturalist and long-time resident, doesn't believe a "young vs. old" conflict exists at Carmel Beach at all.

"There are just a few individuals who throw bottles and behave in an abusive manner if confronted by a local resident," he said.

Capt. Fisher agreed.

"A lot of the youths — the vast majority — who use Carmel Beach are from other areas, including Monterey, Seaside, Pacific Grove.

"Kids from Carmel who create a problem are in the minority."

PRINTED FORMS

In any real estate transaction you'll normal- ting point. It's what goes into the blanks, what ly find printed forms used in the area of sales contracts, deeds, mortgages, and leases. Ever wonder why any layman can't use printed forms himself and save the fees of an attorney, Realtor, or lending institution?

A typical legal stationery store will have dozens of varieties of leases, deeds and mortgage forms, but which is the right one for your situation? These printed forms are only a star-is crossed out, and what is added that gives you the value, security, and protection that you are paying the experts for.

Believe me, some of the largest financial losses and legal hassles have resulted from printed forms being incorrectly used. About the only safe one an amateur can depend on is a marriage license, and that's questionable.

Surfabout coordinator Brad Johnson give contestants in a team paddling event last-minute instructions during the all-day surfing competition.

'Surfabout' has 138 compete

By BOB BATES

SURFING enthusiasts from all over the Monterey Peninsula came to watch what promoters hope will be an annual event, the first Ocean Pacific Sunwear-Sunshine Free Sports Surfabout at Carmel Beach Sunday (June 22).

Brad Johnson of Carmel, owner of Sunshine Freestyle Sports shop in Monterey, who coordinated the all-day event, said 138 contestants from Carmel, Monterey, Santa Cruz, Pacific Grove, Big Sur, Salinas and other Monterey County communities took part in the competition, which began at 6 a.m. and continued until after 8 p.m.

Most contestants were from Carmel, Johnson said.

Events included skim-board, surfing heats for juniors 15 to 17, men's surfing age 18 to 24 and master's competitions for ages 25 and older.

Also included were a distance paddling relay race, team paddling relay, open boogie board, open long board, open women's surfing and open kneeboard.

"The idea, basically, was to give the young people in Carmel and surrounding area something to do," Johnson said.

"There was an air of fun, rather than competition throughout the day, although there was also a competitive spirit present."

The competition was planned around the tides, Johnson said, so the skim boarding competitions might occur during the middle of the day at low tide.

Wave activity was taken into consideration in timing the surfing events, Johnson said.

"It went really well," Johnson told the Pine Cone. "It was really an educational experience for me."

AFTER THE COMPETITION, volunteers remained to clean the beach and remove bottles and other debris, Johnson

"We left the beach as clean or cleaner than we found it," he said. "Everyone pitched in to help. I hope the city was

A city permit was required for the competition, Johnson

"Next time we would like to have a two-day event," he said. "We did not complete all the events we had planned this year, and were really pushed."

Those events are planned at 3 p.m. at Carmel Beach Sunday (June 29).

An awards banquet and dance was held at the YMCA Hall in Monterey after the competition Sunday.

Winners of the day's events included:

John DeFloria, third.

Long board-first, Marc Cross, Carmel; second, Terry Rogenson, Big Sur; and Billy Simpson, Carmel. Knee board-Billy Simpson, Carmel, first; Jim Smith, Carmel, second; and

Boogie board-Jim Smith first, Randy Rumril of Pacific Grove, second; and Mark Cross of Carmel, third. Skim-board-Tony Purvis of Pebble Beach, first; Steve Brown, second, and

Don Ogawa, third. Distance paddling-Mark Cross, first, John DeFloria, second; and Drew

Team paddling-first, Team O'Neal of O'Neil's Surf Shop in Santa Cruz; second, P.G. Psycho Squad; and third, the Eighth Street Gang of Carmel. Juniors surfing (ages 15-17)-Brent Bispo, first; Steven Heger, second; and Michael Bauer, third. Boys surfing (ages 12-14)—Tim Flannery, first; Aspen Jordon, second place. Women's surfing-Nancy Harvey of Carmel, first; Theresa Flannery of Pacific Grove, second; and Annie Spaulding of Carmel, third.

Two events that were not finished last Sunday will be held Sunday (June 29) at Carmel Beach at 3 p.m.: Master's surfing for ages 25 and older, and the men's competition for ages 18 to 24.

An "All-Around Waterman" grand prize will be awarded to the competitor with the most points during the entire surfabout. Points will be computed with the completion of events June 29.

Surfers, sun, sand and sailboats all contributed to the visual impact of a surfabout at Carmel Beach, Sunday. The event attracted contestants and spectators from all over Monterey

This skim-boarding contestant shows his stuff to judges during the surfabout. Conditions were perfect for the event during the mid-day low tide.

Observing a surfer at close quarters, this man and dog seem about to be swallowed up by a passing wave. Actually, both man and beast were high and dry just as a wave crested.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

Barbara Shimek

For Barbara Shimek, First Impressions is a "different, unusual name" for her Carmel gallery, which offers different and unusual posters, prints, art objects and crafts.

On the west side of Dolores, north of Sixth, it is primarily a contemporary gallery. However, American, California and some European artists — from Matisse to San Francisco's Goines — are featured.

Born in Germany, Mrs. Shimek went to school there and in Switzerland. She lived in Carmel earlier, then came back four years ago "from all over the world."

Although she had been involved with art for many years and had worked in other museums and galleries, First Impressions is the first gallery she has owned. She said, "I was ready to do my own thing and this is the type of art I enjoy."

Among the unusual offerings at First Impressions are recreations of antique toy soldiers by E. Joe Shimek, the owner's husband.

music and dancing by the young students. The Rev. Ray Hess was a project of Carmel and Carmel Valley churches.

The couple lives in Monterey. Both their children are studying engineering. Son E. Joe Shimek III is at U.C. Berkeley, and daughter Susanne — who graduated from Robert Louis Stevenson School last year is at Stanford.

CAROUSEL GARDEN RESTAURANT

Eddie Winstead, Dick Vargas, Hal Evans

A big white carousel horse divides the main dining room at the new Carousel Garden Restaurant in the Valley Hills Center, Carmel Valley.

The owners — Eddie Winstead, Dick Vargas and Hal Evans — have carried the gala atmosphere throughout. There are other antique carousel horses, and a large patio features Indian wedding umbrellas.

The restaurant is open seven days and seven nights each week, serving brunch, lunch and its specialty, country dinners.

Winstead describes the new restaurant as "a little more sophisticated Clock," referring to the Monterey restaurant opened by the three entrepreneurs about two years ago.

Winstead has the most experience in the restaurant business.

Originally, he had a portrait photography studio, but when he returned to school he took a job as a waiter and "fell in love with the business." Now he adds up 21 years on the Peninsula, during all of which he has been part of the restaurant scene.

Winstead is single and lives in Rancho Rio Vista. Carmel

Winstead is single and lives in Rancho Rio Vista, Carmel Valley.

Vargas had only one job before he became involved with restaurants; for 36 years he had been in management and display with Montgomery Ward. He did have some related experience in the Army, where he was in charge of three mess halls.

A California native and single, he also lives in Rancho Rio Vista.

Evans originally owned a Carnation distributorship on the Peninsula. He contributes experience as one of the former owners of Jack London's in Carmel and the Briar House.

Single, he lives near the mouth of the Valley.

Two of the partners — Winstead and Vargas — somehow find time to be partners in still another venture. They buy, move into, refurbish and sell homes — and many as four in a year. Not only do they consider that a fascinating challenge, but according to Winstead it is the "mainstay" that helps to make it possible for them to own and continue their restaurants.

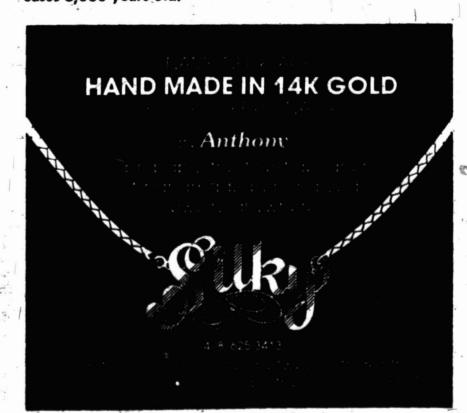

Correction

Art and Treasures, the art and antique jewelry store operated by Rosalind Kidder and Jane Bradford, was incorrectly located in our last column.

The store is on San Carlos, between Ocean and Seventh.

Egyptian varnish, made by dissolving resin in oil, has been found smooth and uncracked on some mummy cases 3,000 years old.

Barracudas are nipped by Morgan Hill; suffer first loss in dual meet since 1977

THE CARMEL BAR-RACUDA Swim and Diving Team narrowly lost to the Morgan Hill Swim Team at a dual meet in Morgan Hill Saturday, June 21.

The score was 698 to 657. It was the first defeat for the swim club at a dual meet since 1977, when it lost to Gilroý.

Dual meets are practice competitives for the swimmers who are preparing for the championship meet against Central California teams in August.

BRUNO'S FOOD CENTER Padres continued their mastery of the Pony League, taking two more games and remaining undefeated.

Monday's game was a 13-5 victory over the struggling Carmel Rotary Club Mets, now three and nine in league play. Coaches Bob Read and Russ Richards chose John Juhring as a starter, his first pitching assignment. Juhring earned the win, yielding four runs on seven hits, with five walks and three strikeouts.

Greg Nelson came on in relief in the fifth. The Padres collected 11 hits, including Howard Maat's three for three, two RBI and four runs scored; John Keller's two for three, both doubles, two RBI and two runs scored; Mike Kelly two for four and two runs; Richie Smelser and Thyme Lewis each one for two; Craig Bell one for three and an RBI, and Greg Nelson one for four and scoring two runs. Pitcher Mike White, while taking the loss, contributed two for four, including a triple for the Mets. Brett Jackson and Joe De Rousi each went one for three and Paul Winslow contributed one for four, an RBI single in the first inning.

THURSDAY'S ACTION netted the Padres their 11th consecutive win as they squeaked by the always tough Carmel Host Lions Club Lions 2-1.

Credit winning pitcher Steve Read, 5-0, with another strong effort in recording his second no-hit game of the season. Read went the route, striking out 12 Lions, allowing the opponents an unearned run via one of his 10 walks and an error, one of two committed by the Padres. The Padre offense was provided by John Juhring's two for three and one RBI; Greg Nelson, a double in three at bats and one run scored; Mike Kelly and Craig Bell one for three each, Bell collecting an RBI. Lions losing pitcher Marcel Danko, now two and three, gave up five hits, struck out five and walked one.

THE CARMEL HOST Lions Club Lions boosted their stats in the win column on Tuesday by taking the Kiwanis Club

Bronco League

BY WENDY BANKS

As the Final PITCH was thrown, there was no question in anyone's mind that Derek Rayne does reign as champion for the Bronco League of Carmel Youth Baseball.

They had tied for first place with Pine Inn for the first half of the season, and secured title to the second half by themselves.

Helping Derek Rayne achieve number one position were pitchers Kerry Woodson, Chris Hall, Jim Miller and Mike Cox, all of whom rotated in the infield when not pitching. Catching duties were performed by Matt Pretzer and Nick Long. The outfield was composed of Sean Smythe, Chris Clark, Pietro de Persiis, Andoni Kastros, Mario Lozado and Ted Miller. Coaches were Graves Cox and Buzz Cole.

A RECAP of other games the final week included a win by John Roscelli over Pine Inn, 7-4. Kent Rullman scored two runs, Curt Graham got a double and Scott Murray got on base four times for the winners.

Granite Rock came up on top of La Playa, 13-5, with Mike Takigawa and Marc Huntley scoring three runs apiece. Brian O'Neil added two doubles and Brennon Langley one. Chris Franklin gave up only two hits in three innings for La Playa, and Perry Tarsitano led a double play for Granite Rock.

Derek Rayne made some rain fall on Granite Rock when they made up their rain date. Despite a fine double play by Marc Huntley and a homerun by Mike Takigawa, Derek Rayne won 10-7. Kerry Woodson and Matt Pretzer both scored three runs, while Chris Clark and Nick Long had two RBI. Steven Roberts made a good catch deep in center for Granite Rock.

La Playa took care of John Roscelli with some hitting from Greg Solt and a good glove from Jeff Fenton. Oliver Wildschut made an outstanding double play for Pine Inn, but it wasn't enough to down Derek Rayne, with Chris Hall scoring three runs and pitching two innings with only one hit.

Marco Flores blasted a home run for Pine Inn to help them beat Granite Rock 11-9. Ricky Van Every picked up three doubles, while on the mound for the winners were Greg Hinton and Brian Dalton.

DEREK RAYNE easily got by Roscelli in the last game of Kerry Woodson scored four runs and had two RBI. Matt Pretzer, Sean Smythe and Pietro de Persiis all scored three for the victors, and Chris Clark made a double play. A big third inning saw lots of runs scored by both teams.

Tigers 5 to 3.

Lions starter Todd Nottenkamper (1-0), picked up the win in going 6 1/3 innings before manager Ed Bronfeld called in -Marcel Danko to shut down the Tiger rally in the seventh. Danko struck out the two batters he faced with two runners on. Tiger losing pitcher Scott Siegrist allowed four hits, struck out four and issued four free passes. Siegrist was helped by a great double play in the bottom of the sixth: Lions centerfielder Mickey Battaglini led off the inning with a triple to left-center. Dave Carroll followed with a line drive to first baseman Richie Han, who rifled the ball to Brett Rozelle at third, doubling up Battaglini, who had started for home on the crack of the bat.

Lions' offense was provided by Danko, two for two (both doubles), one RBI and one run scored, and Chris Whipple's one for three, a two-RBI single in the fifth.

The Tigers four hits were contributed by Siegrist, two for two, and Han, two for three. Each scored one run.

THE BARNYARD MERCHANTS Association A's gained an early lead in their game against the Rotary Club Mets on Wednesday, gave that lead up in the top of the sixth and then came from behind to win 7 to 6.

Javan Bernstein picked up his first win of the season in relief of John Gill (2-2) who pitched the first 5 2/3 innings. Gill had Mets losing pitcher Paul Winslow gave up 10 hits, struck out four and issued six free passes. The A's offense was led by Bernstein, two doubles in going three for four, three runs scored; Chris Mechel, three for four, including the winning hit, an RBI single in the sixth; Tony Giammanco, Jerry Tarsitano and Gill each went one for three, and Ron Wallace one for two.

The Met's Sam Salerno and Mike White each went two for three and had one RBI and one run scored; Brett Jackson went one for two and Winslow one for three, one RBI and two runs scored.

HE LIONS won their second game of the week, taking the three; Jared Ellison scored two runs for the losers. Mets seven to four on Saturday.

Lions' pitcher Trey Whipple (2-2) picked up the win, allowing four runs on five hits, striking out four and walking four. Mets starter Mike White (1-4) took the loss, with relief from Paul Winslow. White struck out two and issued six walks. Winslow struck out four and issued three walks. The Lions' heavy bats were wielded by Marcel Danko, two for four, one a triple, and two runs scored; Chris Whipple, one for two, an RBI-single in the fourth, and two runs scored, and Todd Nottenkamper, one for three and one RBI. The Mets out-hit the Lions five-four, with White going two for two, one a double in the first, and two runs scored; Winslow and Mike Tehan each went one for three, and Brett Jackson one for Chris Mechel (3-1) picked up his third victory over Tim Krebs (1-3).

The Tigers had a strong offense going, outhitting the A's 11-9, but couldn't put the runs across. Tiger catcher Chris Palma had a perfect four for four, one RBI and two runs scored. Krebs contributed two for three, one a double, and scored three runs. Kevin Meade and T.J. Cain went one for two. Richie Han and Brett Rozelle each went one for three and two runs scored. The A's attack was led by Bernstein, two for four (one a triple), two RBI and two runs scored; Mechel two for four, one run; Jerry Tarsitano two for four, one RBI and two runs scored; Jeff Knepp and Jay Golden each had one for two for the winners.

THE PROPOSAL to annex a large portion of Carmel Valley to the Carmel Sanitary District has been withdrawn.

The sanitary district board of directors voted unanimously at its June 19 meeting to withdraw its proposal to annex the Valley floor up to Garland Ranch Regional Park, including the Carmel Valley Ranch development and Rancho Tierra Grande subdivision.

The directors had been advised the day before that the Local Agency Formation Commission intended to deny the annexation proposal.

Michael Johnson, LAFCO executive director, issued a report last week on the proposal, noting that the annexation would be premature.

He also noted that the sanitary district had altered the proposal since it was first submitted last year, eliminating its intent to provide on-site wastewater management within the area to be annexed.

The only intent of the annexation as of last week was to tax property owners within the area to finance a $200,000 feasibility study for a major trunkline and sewer project.

Johnson told this newspaper after his report was released that "I recommended denial of the proposal without prejudice because annexation is not acceptable for just taxing to pay for a feasibility study."

Michael Zambory, general manager of the sanitary district, said the directors' decision to withdraw the request was based not only on Johnson's recommendation, but also from the widespread opposition of residents to it.

"Rancho Tierra Grande, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, LAFCO — everyone was lining up against us, saying they didn't want the annexation," Zambory said.

"Why should we continue with it when it's going to fall flat on its face?"

ZAMBORY said the sanitary district eliminated septic tank management services from the annexation proposal after the county Health Department maintained that inspection of septic systems was its jurisdiction.

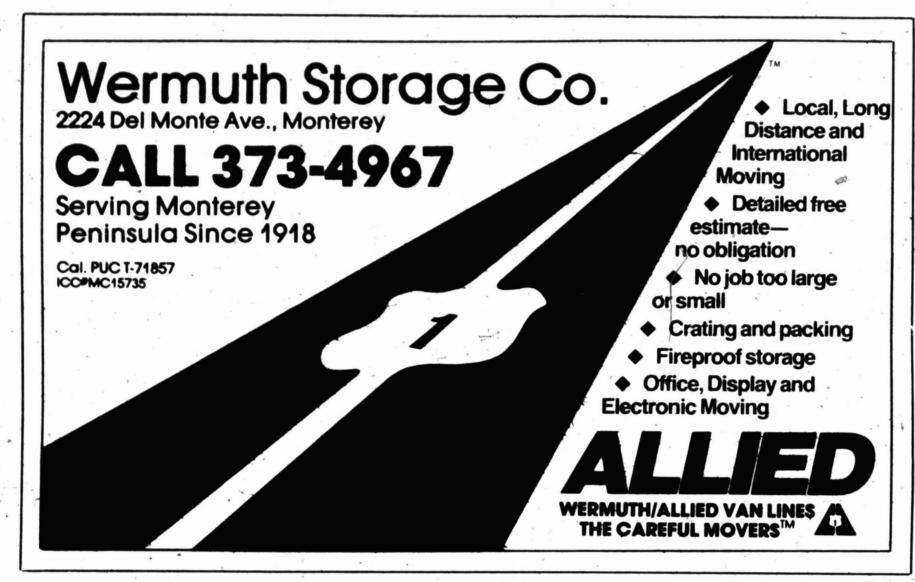

"The Health Department told us it was not going to hand over its responsibility for inspection and review of septic tanks," Zambory said.

He questioned why the Health Department did not indicate its position when the annexation was first proposed last November.

Walter Wong, director of the county Health Department, told this newspaper last week there was never any question that his agency is responsible for determining what land is suitable for septic tank installations, inspection of tanks and abatement where a system is failing.

"We have all the authority for this, as delegated by the Regional Water Quality Control Board," he said.

Wong added that maintenance of septic tanks is provided by private companies, and that the sanitary district was not mandated to provide the maintenance services.

Transportation plan unfolds

(First of Three Parts)

LIMITED TRAFFIC capacity of Highway I will constrain long-range development of the Carmel coastal area.

A background report for the Local Coastal Program (LCP) for the unincorporated area around Carmel notes that Highway 1 between Carpenter Street and Rio Road is already at or near capacity during peak use periods.

The draft "300 series" report prepared by the Monterey County planning staff proposes to limit development in the Carmel coastal area according to capacities for water supply, wastewater disposal and traffic.

The section on transportation points to the need for "integrated planning and management of Highway 1 to insure that coastal access opportunities are protected and that efficient circulation for residents is maintained."

At issue is how remaining road capacity is to be allocated for uses allowed in the Coastal Act, according to Ed Davidson, the county coastal planner who drafted the report.

Davidson notes that the state Department of Transportation has acquired the right-of-way to build the Hatton Canyon Freeway, which would replace the two-lane road from Carpenter Street to Rio Road. He said the freeway is included in the Monterey County Transportation Plan, although funding has not been budgeted for it. Cost of the freeway is estimated at $10.6 million.

THE REPORT RECOMMENDS that as long as the freeway is included in the county transportation plan, improvements in the present alignment of Highway 1 should be kept to a minimum.

Davidson told this newspaper that the county does not expect Caltrans to fund the freeway, and since county funds are anything but assured, the present Highway 1 configuration is expected to remain the same under the LCP.

The amount, location and density of development, therefore, will be directly limited by the remaining capacity on Highway 1, the main artery into the area.

HIGHWAY 1 SOUTH of Rio Road would be maintained as a two-lane road, and any "improvements to it should be consistent with preservation of Highway 1 as a scenic, two-lane road," the report states.

Davidson drafted the "300 series" background report from comment taken at several public meetings. A final "500 series" background report will be completed within two weeks, he said, containing recommendations on the amount of development, its location and the densities to be allowed in the Carmel coastal area.

The final "500 series" background report will be among 14 reports - including public access, natural resources and housing — that will be incorporated into the draft LCP for the area, Davidson explained.

The county Planning Department will draft the LCP and draw up two maps, one outlining the densities and land planning to be allowed, another showing the circulation, traffic routes and planned road improvements. The draft LCP and maps for the Carmel coastal area will be presented at public hearings before the county Planning Commission in September, Davidson said. They will also be circulated for review by state agencies.

When the LCPs for all areas along the coast are adopted, the regional Coastal Commission will be abolished and the county will take over planning and land use decisions along its coastal area, using the LCPs as a guideline.

Here is what the county Planning Department report said about transportation:

THE MAJOR HIGHWAYS providing access to the combined coastal areas of Carmel and Del Monte are Highway 1, which passes through Carmel, and Highway 68 which borders the Del Monte Forest.

In addition, the Lighthouse Avenue corridor provides access between central Monterey and the Asilomar area. Service improvements in this corridor are the responsibility of the cities of Monterey and Pacific Grove. Paralleling Lighthouse Avenue is the Southern Pacific right-of-way, which has been proposed for a light-rail-vehicle route as well as a bicycle route.

Highway 1 is a state-designated scenic highway. The southern section of the study is from Malpaso Creek to Carmel Valley Road and the central section is from Carmel Valley Road to the Highway 1-Highway 68 interchange at Carmel Hill.

Highway 1 has the heaviest amount of traffic in the central section, where it is four lanes. Traffic volume measured at San Luis Avenue averages 42,000 vehicles per day, increasing to 50,000 vehicles per day during peak summer months.

The segment of Highway 1 between Carmel Valley Road and Ocean Avenue has its heaviest traffic where the highway is three lanes. Traffic volume averages 27,500 vehicles per day, increasing to 33,500 during peak use.

This segment of the highway is operating beyond its capacity, with peak-hour volume exceeding its ability to handle it by as much as 240 percent during peak use periods.

The southern section of the road has much less traffic. Traffic volume south of Rio Road averages 10,600 vehicles per day, and a peak month use of 12,700 vehicles per day. This segment of highway is two lanes. The section is operating beyond its capacity, with peak-hour volume exceeding ability to handle it by as much as 230 percent in certain places.

No major improvements are planned for this segment of the highway.

HIGHWAY 68

Highway 68 is a two-lane highway connecting Pacific Grove with Highway 1.

It provides access to the Del Monte Forest area as well as the coastal areas of Monterey Peninsula. Control is exercised by signals at Highway 1, Prescott Avenue and David Avenue.

The portion of Highway 68 between Asilomar and Forest Avenue is presently meeting capacity demands and is projected to continue to do so through 1995, using medium development intensity assumptions. The portion between Forest Avenue and Highway 1 is inadequate, with peak hour volume exceeding capacity by 25 percent.

CALTRANS

The state Department of Transportation said parts of Route 1 between Rio Road near the Carmel River and the Ord Village Overhead near Sand City are inadequate, while the remaining portions will become deficient under the medium and high-density levels of development in 1995.

The portion of Route 1 between Rio Road and Morse Drive is a two-lane road, while the portion from Morse to Ocean Avenue is basically a three-lane facility with two lanes uphill and one lane downhill. From Ocean Avenue to San Luis Avenue it is a four-lane facility, with capacity control being exercised by signals at Ocean and Carpenter Street. This portion of the route is currently deficient. The remainder of the segment is a four-lane freeway which will become deficient as growth approaches 1995 medium-density development.

Between Rio Road and San Luis Avenue, the needed additional capacity can be provided by widening the existing facility or building a new parallel facility. If the existing facility is widened to eight lanes and a traffic signal is installed at Carmel Valley Road, 1995 medium-density demands can be met.

The draft Monterey County Transportation Plan includes the four-lane Hatton Canyon Freeway, which would adequately meet the needs of this segment of Route 1 for both medium- and high-density development. Its cost is estimated at $10,655,000.

There is local opposition from varying groups to widening the existing road and to building the proposed freeway. Bus service, under current circumstances, cannot significantly alleviate existing capacity problems.

On the remainder of Route 1 from San Luis Avenue to the Ord Village Overhead, additional lanes will be required. County Transportation Plan at an estimated cost of $6,400,000.

Critical areas are at Carmel Hill and between Aguajito Road and Route 68. The weaving area between Route 68 and Aguajito Road is inadequate.

The problem area between the Carmel Hill Interchange and Munras Avenue is on the southbound lanes, where the grade (about 6.5 percent) slows large vehicles and weaving traffic reduces capacity. The Route 1-Route 68 Interchange at Carmel Hill is experiencing some problems at present and these will be accentuated by continued growth. Some future revision of the interchange will undoubtedly be required. It will be necessary to provide improved access to the Del Monte Forest by direct ramps and relocation of the Del Monte Forest entrance from Route 68.

The addition of two lanes to the existing freeway from San Luis Avenue to Ord Village Overhead will increase capacity by about 1,300 vehicles per hour (one way). This increase will meet 1995 medium-density demands for all sections of Route 1 except the portion between Aguajito Road and Route 68. Additional improvements may be made or it may be necessary to accept heavy traffic.

If improvements included in the adopted Monterey County Transportation Plan are implemented as scheduled, Route 1 between Rio Road and the Ord Village Overhead will meet medium-density capacity demands in all areas except for the Aguajito-Route 68 Segment noted above.

Asilomar (near Pacific Grove) is currently experiencing capacity problems at some locations.

The portion of Route 68 between Asilomar and Forest Avenue is presently meeting capacity demands and will continue to do so through 1995 with medium- and high-density development.

The portion between Forest Avenue and Route 1 is inadequate and will experience more severe problems as growth increases demand.

The adopted Monterey County Transportation Plan does not include any specific improvements on this segment of Route 68. To meet future capacity demands it will be necessary to widen the roadway. The signals limbs capacity where they currently exist. It is anticipated that a signal will be required at the Haul Road Gate to the Del Monte Forest when it is opened to residential traffic.

Between Forest Avenue and Prescott Avenue it will be necessary to widen the road from its present width of 30 feet to four lanes to meet 1995 medium-density demands.

Widening will also be required between Route 1 and Prescott Avenue.

ALTERNATE PLANS

The Monterey Peninsula Corridor Study pointed to several possible approaches to relieve the region's transportation problems

The Hatton Canyon Freeway and the Haul Road-Jefferson Street connection are examples of projects conceived in an era of relatively high public spending and whose future construction is no longer certain due to a spending limit for public projects.

Alternative transportation — particularly public transit — has the potential to relieve traffic congestion, but its promise remains unfulfilled.

Historic patterns of dispersed land uses coupled with infrequent service schedules has led to the decline in patronage. This trend has been reversed, due mostly to high fuel costs, but the potential for significantly reducing traffic congestion appears a long way off.

The abandoned Southern Pacific railroad right-of-way between Monterey and Asilomar has been proposed as a light rail vehicle route. If developed, it would be useful to Monterey Peninsula visitors' mobility without adding to traffic congestion.

The improvements being made to accommodate bicyclists have led to increased use. Separate bike paths proposed for the Southern Pacific right-of-way, by being safer and avoiding hills, could lead to increased bicycle use. While it is not expected that bicycle use alone would significantly reduce traffic congestion, along with walking, car-pooling and transit use, it can lead to improved traffic conditions on our roads.

CORRIDOR STUDY CONCLUSIONS

Travel demand in 1995, generated by development based on existing zoning and land use plans, will create problems that cannot be met by street, highway, and transit improvements funded from available resources.

Improved transit service has only limited potential in reducing current and a future capacity demands on major streets. While transit can serve a substantial number of trips, the impact on individual streets is limited.

In highly developed business areas it may be advisable to accept more traffic than widen streets or eliminate parking.

In general, proposed improvements (presently unfunded) included in the adopted Monterey County Transportation Plan will meet some of the future capacity demands created by medium-density development.

HOLMAN HIGHWAY

Holman Highway is the principal link between Pacific Grove and Carmel area destinations.

It is also used to avoid congestion on the Lighthouse Avenue corridor between Pacific Grove and Monterey or for north-bound Highway 1 destinations.

Peak traffic is on weekday commute hours. The highway's additional function of providing access to the coastal resources in the Asilomar/Spanish Bay area does not coincide with the weekday peak traffic loads. For coastal recreation and visitors, it is the summer and holiday weekends when the peak flows occur. There are often serious delays at the Highways 1 and 68 intersection on holiday weekends.

COASTAL ACT

South of the Carmel River, Highway 1 is and should remain a two-lane road.

The Big Sur Transportation report discusses problems on the coast highway which are applicable to this portion in the Carmel segment. Among the proposed traffic solutions are park-and-ride or staging areas which may involve land uses within the Carmel area. Land uses which increase the capacity of coastal access roads should be encouraged.

Between Rio Road and San Luis Avenue, the Hatton Canyon freeway is planned to replace the present highway alignment. This facility, if built, would reduce most of the current problems of this two-mile bottleneck.

Improvements in the present alignment of Highway 1 should be kept to a minimum.

Much of the recent increase in traffic for this area has resulted from growth in the Carmel Valley area. Since the growth area is outside the Coastal Zone, the LCP cannot apply. Nonetheless, the county could adopt policies which discourage the use of automobiles similar to Coastal Act policies. These include encouraging the use of public transit by clustering residential or office developments and reducing the number of trips by providing convenience commercial uses and neighborhood recreation areas next to residential areas.

CONCLUSIONS

Land use policies and development patterns which reduce automobile dependence will enhance coastal access opportunities and should be incorporated into the Local Coastal Programs.

The Carmel Pine Cone

• Increased traffic on coastal access roads is mainly the result of development outside the Coastal Zone, thus beyond the jurisdiction of the LCPs. Therefore, regardless of land use limitations placed on properties within the Coastal Zone, reduced traffic volumes would be minimal.

• Caltrans has acquired the right of way for the Hatton Canyon Freeway. Construction funding is included in the adopted County Transportation Plan to relieve the problems on Highway 1 north of Rio Road. As the gateway to the Big Sur area, Highway 1 south of Rio Road will have capacity problems if all lots on record in Big Sur are developed and growth in recreational traffic continues.

Highway 68 between Highway 1 and Pacific Grove is currently experiencing capacity problems during daily and weekend peaks. Both priority and non-priority coastal uses will add to the existing problems nad affect, to some extent, the flow of traffic on coastal access roads.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The following recommendations are proposed to extend highway capacity and guide development in accordance with Coastal Act priorities:

- Alternate transportatation should be encouraged, including public transit, shuttle buses, car pools and bicycle pathways.
- As long as the Hatton Canyon Freeway remains in the County Transportation Plan, improvements in the present alignment of Highway 1 should be kept to a minimum.
- Improvements south of Rio Road should be consistent with preservation of Highway 1 as a scenic two-lane road. Non-priority coastal developments should not interfere with the access and recreation policies of the Coastal Act and Big Sur LCP.
- To conform to the Coastal Act, most remaining capacity on Highway 68 should be reserved for coastal priority uses. Commitment of residential development in Del Monte Forest with principal access from Highway 68 should be avoided.

New school head would improve worker morale

By STEVE HELLMAN

WILLIAM H. RAND, newly-appointed superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District, says improving employee morale is one of his main objectives.

"My first objective," Rand said, "is to sit down with the school board and agree on a set of goals for 1980-81."

The main goal, he said, is to make jobs more satisfactory for district employees in the face of continuing fiscal constraints. The chief challenge, he said, is to maintain quality education despite the impact on financial resources from Proposition 13, the Serrano-Priest decision and declining enrollment.

Rand said he hopes in his first job as a superintendent he can improve communication and relations between the school district and the community.

Asked if the disagreement between the school board and the last superintendent, Dr. Carl Wilsey, would be a problem for him, Rand replied: "Based on my two months as acting superintendent, the board and I have established a sound

"I think we'll work well together."

RAND, 37, was selected June 18 from a field of 108 candidates for the $40,000-a-year post.

Wilsey resigned May 1, citing philosophical differences between himself and the school board.

Rand has been acting superintendent since Wilsey left, and will take over the post July 1. He had been assistant superintendent in charge of instruction and personnel since November 1978.

He said the school board has not yet decided on how to find a new assistant superintendent.

Asked if the school board might take advantage of the vacancy to consolidate the position and trim the administrative staff, Rand said the board is considering that and other possibilities.

Rand began his career 16 years ago as a French teacher after graduating from the University of Minnesota. He was an assistant principal three years and principal for six years of a high school in Minnesota before moving here.

He said he had aspirations of becoming a superintendent, but did not come to the Carmel schools with that position in

"It's a marvelous opportunity to be able to step into it at this time," he said.

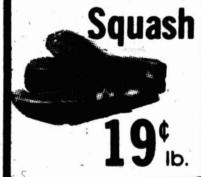

He is married and has a daughter, 6. He enjoys jogging, reading and outdoor activities.

Baptist church starts program for youth

By STEVE HELLMAN

IN THE WAKE OF ERIC BELL'S suicide, First Baptist Church in Carmel Valley is organizing a youth activities program.

The Rev. Roy McBeth, pastor, said several members of his congregation are planning sports events, nature outings and other recreation to reach Valley youth.

"For kids that are bored and don't know what to do this summer, we're hoping to get them involved," he said.

Eric Bell, a 15-year-old Carmel Valley boy, committed suicide at Monterey County Juvenile Hall in Salinas May 12, capping a history of personal problems and criminal acts.

The Rev. Mr. McBeth said he knew Eric, and that the boy's

'We could have done a lot more for (Eric Bell), even though he always stalled in joining the church. I didn't realize his situation was that critical.'

suicide made him realize more could be done to turn the Valley youth toward wholesome activity. Eric lived not far from First Baptist, which is on Carmel Valley and Schulte Roads.

"Eric came to me one time," the Rev. Mr. McBeth recalled, "and asked if we could build a bicycle jump. He was hungry for recreation.

"We could have done a lot more for him, even though he always stalled in joining the church. I didn't realize his situation was that critical.

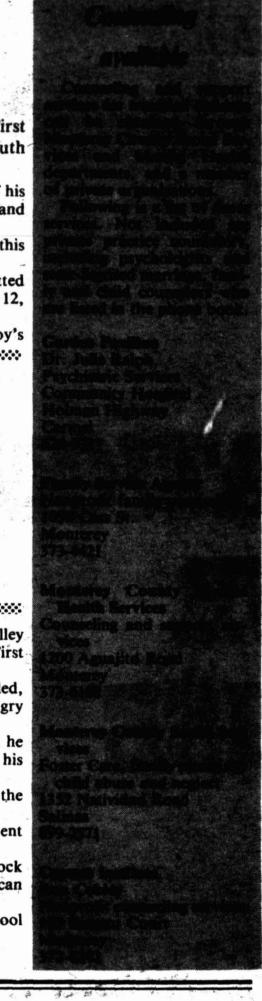

"We need to get some rapport going with the kids in the Valley."

Church members organizing the activities are Kent Murtland, Randy Bird, Brian Groza and Aileen Piper.

Murtland said the group hopes to have beach parties, rock climbing expeditions in Big Sur and water skiing if a boat can be found.

"We're gearing it toward junior high and senior high school kids who want something to do this summer," he said.

Cable TV programming widened

A $500,000 EARTH station-satellite hook-up recently installed by MPTV cable television in Monterey will offer subscribers in Carmel and Carmel Valley and the rest of the Peninsula a wide variety of programming never before available in the area, according to Bill Patenaude, marketing director for the company.

MPTV is owned by the San Francisco Chronicle.

Salinas was first to benefit from the new service, which was instituted June 1, when MPTV began receiving signals from Sat-Com I, an 22,000 miles in space orbiting Earth.

Its signals are beamed directly to a new receiver at the MPTV receiving station atop Los Laureles Grade in Carmel Valley.

MPTV is readjusting its equipment to service Carmel,

RCA communication satellite Pebble Beach, Monterey and Pacific Grove by mid-July.

> Carmel Valley and Carmel Valley Village should begin receiving the new programming offered by the cable service by late August or early September, Patenaude said.

> MPTV previously rented programming from microwave company in San Francisco that beamed its transmissions to the receiving station in Carmel Valley. The signals were then rebroadcast to sets of MPTV subscribers.

Under its new procedure, MPTV will broadcast satellite transmissions by microwave, rather than hard cable as in the past, Patenaude said.

Programs offered will include "Showtime" entertainment specials; sports coverage from the East (16 to 24 hours daily) a Christian broadcasting network, and live coverage of congressional hearings from Washington,

"We will also carry KEMO, Channel 20 in San Francisco, an ethnic station that broadcasts in Spanish, Portuguese, Japanese, Italian, and Filipino languages," Patenaude said.

Other area channel offerings include: KTVU Channel 2 in Oakland; KRON Channel 4, KPIX Channel 5, KGO Channel 7 and KQED Channel 9 in San Francisco: KSBW Channel 8 in Salinas; KMST Channel 46 in Monterey, and KNTV Channel 11 in San Jose.

The Monterey Board of Education will assume control of Channel 54, previously broadcast by MPTV, according to Patenaude.

MPTV President Ted Hughett called the new programming capability of his company the "state of the art" in cable television technology.

Hospital expansion advances

Plans for expansion of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula have moved a step closer to approval, according to administrator Thomas E. Tonkin.

He said it appears that construction will start next year, to be completed in 1982.

Latest endorsement for a two-story services building of 41,000 square feet, to cost $5.5 million, has been issued after a third hearing on the project, which will relieve crowded conditions in 15 hospital departments and provide an alternative birthing center.

That hearing was conducted at Asilomar May 20 by Muriel Evens, administrative law judge with the Office of Statewide Health Planning and Development. Her recommendation for approval was submitted by the hospital to Henry Zrestsky, director of the Office of Statewide Health Planning and Development. Zrestsky is expected to decide soon on issuance of a certificate of need which would allow the project to go forward.

Total cost of the project is $9.3 million, of which $5.5 million is for the services building. The rest is for renovation of 6,000 square feet of vacated space in the present building, new equipment, site development, professional fees, insurance, bonds and permits.

Help offered crime victims

Crime victims are being sought to participate in seminar groups and workshops on the Monterey Peninsula in cooperation with the Aid to Victims of Crime Program.

Volunteers in Action has received a one-year continuation of its Community Anti-Crime Program, which is sponsored by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The emphasis of the program is on developing leadership through training among senior citizens, assistance for older women crime victims. victim-to-victim support and the "Buddy Program," which provides adult friends and companions for children 6 to 15 from single-parent

Kenyans jog' because they have to

By MUKAMI IRERI

NEW YORK-WHEN KIPCHOGE KEINO, then older than 30, won track old medals at the Olympics in Mexico City in 1968, he helped establish Kenya as the home of great runners.

He was to become a cult hero among ver-30 Americans who took up jogging.

What most Americans don't seem to realize is that we Kenyans, Kip Keino includ-ed, have been running since we could walk aply because we had to.

In Embu County, where I was born, the earest primary school was three miles from my home. Buses were not in the business of elivering pupils to school—the very idea was unthinkable. My family owned an old car, but it would have been heretical for my father, a vicar, to drive us to school.

"God gave you perfectly good legs," he would say firmly. "Use them."

Bicycles were out of the question. A vicar's stipend could not pay for seven of them, for there were seven children in my family. Other families were not much better off financially. So run we had to. We ran to school, on errands, to visit friends and relatives. On any given day, my schoolmates and I ran an average of 12 miles, though we were not happy about it.

king's ora. The point, however, was to make it to school from wherever one heard it in 15 minutes. And with that deadly ruler in mind, one made it a point to get there on time. It was really a matter of survival. So we ran, ran, ran. Or, as Americans would say, we jogged, jogged, jogged. We jogged three miles to school, three miles home for lunch, three miles back to school and three miles back home.

AND IF ONE'S MOTHER had an errand to run, usually timed to "coincide" with the end of school, one was asked to run that one too. Our mothers, like our teachers, made clear that running was not only a necessar part of one's life, but that one's life depen

A tired runner in Kenya, unlike in America, was not greeted with cola and sympathetic encouragement. One was left to one's own devices, plucking fruit along the way to replenish sagging energy. Passion fruit was my favorite, but the eccentric elder ly owner of the orchard from which I filched it was given to protest, so I often settled for wild fruit.

But whenever I panted back home, tasting my heart in my mouth, my parents would hasten to remind me that they, years before we were born, had to run 26 miles to their schools, barefooted, so that we, their children, would have a better life. That argunent never made sense to me.
Retrospectively, however, there were rewards for all that running. There are ive or six fat people in Embu County today

Helen L. Hodson, Detroit native

Helen L. Hodson, 79, of Carmel Valley, died Sunday, June 22 in Carmel Valley

She was born in Detroit and had lived in Carmel Valley since 1973.

Mrs. Hodson leaves no close relatives. Her husband, John, died in 1970.

Graveside services were held at Grand Lawn Cemetery in Detroit. Farlinger Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements.

Friends suggest that memorial contributions may be made to a charity of the donor's choice.

Robert R. Gunn, was lumber man

Robert R. Gunn, 89, of Carmel died Thursday (June 19) in Carmel Convalescent Hospital.

He had been a Peninsula resident for almost 20 years, after retiring from the lumber business in Santa Rosa where he worked most of his life.

He was a native of Santa Rosa.

He leaves his wife, Eunice Gunn.

Services will be at Mission Mortuary.

Carolyn P. Mills, admiral's widow

Carolyn Park Mills, widow of retired Navy Vice Adm. Earle W. Mills, died Wednesday (June 18) in Ava Maria Convalescent Hospital in Monterey.

She was born in Little Rock, Ark., and lived in Pebble Beach for many years, later moving to Del Mesa Carmel.

Mrs. Mills was a member of the Society of Sponsors of the U.S. Navy, an organization for people who have christened Navy ships.

She leaves her daughter, Mrs. Chester Craig (Shirley) Sargent of Carmel, and a grandson. Her husband died in 1968.

Funeral services were held Monday in the Little Chapel by the Sea in Pacific Grove, with the Revs. Paul Redmond and James Brock officiating. Entombment was in El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove. Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that memorials take the form of contributions to the Monterey History and Art Association for the Maritime Museum Building Fund, P.O. Box 805, Monterey 93940.

Community Church chooses minister

The Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel Valley road, has selected as its minister, the Rev. James Clark Brown, presently the senior minister of First Congregational Church, San Francisco.

The Rev. Mr. Brown is a native Oklahoman, an honor graduate of the Yale Divinity School and is serving his 14th year as minister of the historic First Congregational

Cal-Am workshop planned

A public workshop will be offered by California-American Water Co. Saturday (June 28) at the Carmel Woman's Club, San Carlos and Ninth, from 2 to 5 p.m., about problems affecting both the water supply and the environment of Monterey Peninsula.

Two key issues to be discussed are river bank erosion and providing an adequate water supply for the Peninsula, according to Dick Sullivan, vice president and manager of the water company in Monterey.

Hickses note anniversary

Waldo and Karen Hicks of Hacienda Carmel celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at home with friends and family Saturday (June 21).

Hicks, former owner of Hicks Plumbing in Carmel, has lived in this area since 1912, his wife since their marriage.

Church in San Francisco, "the oldest First Congregational Church west of the Rockies." He has served previous pastorates in New Haven, Conn., Los Angeles and Washington, D.C. He has been a college chapel preacher on several campuses including Yale, Vassar, Pennsylvania State and Stanford. His wife, Verne, is a musician and choral director. They have two children, David, 18, and Edith Louise, 15.

The Rev. Mr. Brown will conclude his San Francisco pastorate in August and preach his first sermon as minister of The Community Church Sept. 14.

Library chief says city administrator is overdue

By BOB BATES

FOOT-DRAGGING by the city administrator is responsible for delays in city acquisition of property for an annex for Harrison Memorial Library, according to. library board President Steve Crouch.

Board members Pat Faul and Walter Gorey were appointed by Crouch at the library board meeting June 19 to urge City Administrator Douglas Peterson and Mayor Barney Laiolo to acquire property next to the library on Lincoln Avenue for an annex.

In April, the library board offered to put up $400,000 if the city would take steps to acquire two properties on Lincoln to expand the library, whose space is inadequate, according to librarian Jo Childers.

"I was approached by some people from the library board today (June 20)," Laiolo said.

"I think we can acquire the property through amicable condemnation. There is some discussion going on at present.' Councilman Frank Lloyd defended Peterson.

"I think Doug is doing a terrific job," Lloyd said. "There are just times when it is very easy for a project to get lost in the shuffle of many projects that are going on."

Lloyd suggested that library board members lobby the City Council and the administrator daily, if necessary, until steps are taken toward acquisition.

"We all know what the library's needs are," he added.

"The City Council is ready to go with the acquisition of the two properties," board member Pat Faul said.

Former Mayor Bernard Anderson urged the board to put the matter on the City Council agenda for June 26.

IN OTHER library board business, $2,000 was budgeted for the upcoming fiscal year for the preservation of materials in the reference library.

County service area fees drastically reduced

By JOANNE HODGEN

A DRAMATIC REDUCTION in user fees for street lighting, drainage and street and sidewalk maintenance in county service areas was approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors at its meeting Tuesday, June 24.

User fees will be reduced by up to 69 percent for most singlefamily homes in Carmel and Carmel Valley service areas for the coming fiscal year (July 1).

There are 30 service areas in Monterey County that pay user fees. Nine are in the Carmel-Carmel Valley areas. Only one will have a slight increase in rates.

Bruce McClain, director of the Public Works Department, submitted a report to the board that included the service fees for the subdivisions.

McClain said leters were sent to homeowners that notified them of the rate changes. There was a one percent response to the notification through phone calls and letters that were mostly informational or negative, he said.

The report submitted to the board said the charge for user fees was computed to make up the difference between the "total budget and available funds such as taxes, carry-over from last year and other funds.'

Later, Richard Wenzlik, a public service engineer with the Public Works Department, said user fees were levied for the first time last year. Because of Proposition 13, property taxes which had previously paid for services were reduced sharply.

Estimates were high for user fees because the Public Works Department wanted to "make sure there was enough money to do the work," Wenzlik said.

However, homeowners have been compensated for being overcharged. It's like buying groceries, Wenzlik said. "If you save last week, you got more this week."

COUNTY SERVICE AREAS that will have annual fees reduced are:

✓ Carmel Point, which paid $9.45, reduced to $3.76, or by ✓ Carmel Meadows tracts 6 and 7, formerly $34.85, reduced to $8.94, or 69 percent.

Carmel Rancho tracts 1, 2 and 3, paid $6.15, reduced to $5.88, or four percent.

Carmel Views 1, 2, 3 and 4 paid $32.85, reduced to $15.56, or 49 percent.

✓ Rioway Tract 2, previously $98.00, reduced to $47.25, or 53 percent.

✓ High Meadows 1 and 2, paid $14.50 last year, reduced to $2.05, or 70 percent less.

✓ Carmel Valley Village, which paid $21.35 last year, will remain about the same, at $21.15. ✓ Robles Del Rio Carmel Subdivision No. 2, paid $30, reduced to $11.12 or by 66 percent. ✓ Only single-family dwellings in the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club area will pay slightly higher fees. The rate increased from $8.55 a year to $8.77. The Carmel Point service area might pay a lower rate if a suggestion by Supervisor Sam Farr is followed. He asked Mc-Clain whether the fee would decrease if a street light that burns

24 hours a day were turned off. McClain said he would instruct Pacific Gas and Electric to User fees will be included in homeowners' property tax bills.

Interim moratorium on Valley projects introduced

AN INTERIM ordinance that prohibits approval of any new projects in Carmel Valley was introduced to the county Board of Supervisors Tuesday, June 24. A public hearing on it was set -for July 8 at 1:30 p.m.

The same provisions will remain in effect that were included in the moratorium implemented by the board before the Master Plan was approved in January.

Superior Court Judge Richard Silver recently ruled that the Master Plan was improperly adopted by the board without proper assessment of its growth-control policies and 2,500-unit housing quota.

The building moratorium was in effect for 11 months while the Master Plan went through final revisions and approval.

The interim ordinance would prohibit the construction of any building and division of property that requires a development permit. That includes tentative maps of standard and minor subdivisions, use permits for multiple dwellings for densities above that permitted in a zone without a use permit and use permits for hotels, motels and resorts. The board will only consider applications for "discretionary" permits that will have little or no effect on population or building densi-

Among projects that will not be affected by the interim ordinance are California-American Water Co. which applied for a permit to build wells, Tantamount Theatre, and Westbrook Timber, which requested a permit for timber removal.

ADDITIONALLY, the ordinance will not apply to the Rancho Canada Hotel project that was approved subject to conditions by the supervisors last year. The planned 175-room resort, however, is the subject of another suit filed by the City of Carmel. which seeks to overturn the use permit.

Though Carmel Valley Ranch is exempt from the moratorium, construction is expected to stop on additional units because of the state Office of Planning and Research conditions that ban development in Carmel Valley until the Master Plan is implemented.

Other proposed projects affected by the moratorium include the Odello family's land at the mouth of the Valley, the 201-lot La Custa subdivision and the 65-lot Quail Meadows subdivision.

A PLAN THAT will halt apply to development near most development visible from Highway 1 and might stop federal legislative efforts to control development was submitted to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday (June 24).

The county Planning Department presented the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan to the supervisors. It was scheduled to be submitted to the county Planning Com-Points that the LCP focused on include:

City Attorney George Brehmer saved the day-and the mayor's face-by telling the mayor he could, with consent of the council, change his vote to "no" on the FOG grant. It all happened like this.

CITY Administrator Douglas Peterson had lumped two

One of the transfers had to do with authorizing $2,000 for new radios for Public Works Department vehicles

The second part of the resolution granted $3,500 to FOG. Somehow, the FOG part of the resolution escaped the mayor's notice, and when a vote was called, he responded with

"Wait a minute. Does this mean I have voted in favor of the FOG thing?" Laiolo asked incredulously.

Indeed he had, Laiolo was informed.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold suggested that the resolution be divided into two separate parts so that each could be voted upon independently.

The council concurred.

Laiolo then went on record opposing the transfer of $3,500 in city funds to a private group he calls a "non-entity."

He was the only councilman to do so.

Now's the time for some action.

Decisions will be made during the next year by the Board of Supervisors, the Planning Commission and other local agencies which will affect the quality of life in the Carmel Valley.

Two key subjects are (1) providing for Peninsula water supply needs while protecting riverbank vegetation, and (2) discussing problems of riverbank erosion.

There's been a lot of talk about these subjects, but many questions remain unanswered.

A step in the right direction

To help find solutions to these problems now, a series of five Community Action Workshops is being sponsored by California-American Water Company beginning Saturday, June 28. Co-host of the workshops is the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. Also participating on the CAW Executive Committee are the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, the Carmel River Watch and the Carmel Area Coalition.

The workshop format is intended to provide an opportunity for a positive exchange of ideas and information from all points of view.

More than just talk

Experts in relevant fields of study will add new information to what we know about the present river environment and will outline options for the future. Dr. Thomas Maddock, University of Arizona professor of geology and a recognized expert on stream geomorphology, will present his analysis of the Carmel River situation at the initial workshop.

The other workshops will tackle the problem of protecting and maintaining the riverbank vegetation, and will explore both financial reality and assignment of responsibility for implementation. The need for four proposed back-up wells will also be discussed in detail.

After the fourth workshop, a catalogue of all proposed solutions will be compiled and forwarded to the appropriate agencies. This information will assist our representatives in making decisions on the complex issues of water supply and riverbank protection for the Carmel Valley Master Plan, and on the four back-up wells and water treatment plant proposed for the lower Carmel Valley.

A consensus report also could be added to guide decision-makers if workshop participants feel that one or more solutions are preferred.

The final Community Action Workshop will be a review of the actions taken by the public officials.

You can help

Whether you are an advocate of no growth, unlimited growth or somewhere in between — your views and ideas are needed for a complete and objective picture of public attitudes toward the available options.

Cal-Am's commitment

Sponsorship of the Community Action Workshop series is Cal-Am's commitment to a thorough cooperative search for effective solutions to these important water supply issues.

Local swimmers to compete in Junior Olympic Championships

Graceful swimmers from throughout California will compete Saturday and Sunday, June 28-29 in the 1980 AAU Region XIII Junior Olympic Synchronized Swimming Championships. Seaside Community Pool, 1186 Wheeler, Seaside, will be the site of competition. Everyone is welcome to attend the meet at no charge.

Synchronized swimming begins Saturday with figures routines at 8:30 a.m., followed by solo routine competition at 2:30 p.m. On Sunday, duet competition begins at 8:30 a.m., followed by team competition at 1:30 p.m. and presentation of awards at 4:30 p.m.

The Cypress Swim Club, composed of young synchronized swimmers of the Monterey Peninsula, is host of the event. The team earned the Far Western Championship in 1979.

All contestants in the AAU meet must have placed in the top three within their region.

Representing the Cypress Club will be cousins Karry and Pavia Wald of Carmel. Karry will compete in the 17-18 solos then appear with her cousin in the 17-18 duets competition. Kassandra Gardner-Dimaggio of Del Rey Oaks will swim in the 10 and under solo event.

Clampett is favorite in amateur golf action

Final rounds of the 69th annual California Golf Association's Amateur Championship will pit top golfers from throughout the state in competition Thursday through Saturday, June 26-28 at the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

The tournament, which began Monday, June 23, has attracted the low 100 qualifiers from Northern California and the low 100 from Southern California in competition. After the Wednesday round the field has been cut to the low 32 who will enter match play today and Friday at 7:30 a.m. Double rounds are scheduled Saturday at 8 a.m. and 1 p.m., when 36 holes will be played for the championship.

Bobby Clampett of Carmel Valley is the local favorite. Winner of the 1978 California Amateur Tournament, he will attempt to wrest the title back from last years' winner and current reigning U.S. Amateur Champion Mark O'Meara.

Clampett comes to the state competition from Baltusral Golf Club, Springfield, N.J., where he finished 39th in the U.S. Open. Clampett was the first amateur to win a major professional tournament since 1955 when he triumphed at the Spaulding Pro-Am in January this year. He was awarded the Haskim Trophy (golf's equivalent to football's Heisman Trophy).

Other top golfers scheduled to compete are Tim Norris of Fresno State University, a member of the collegiate First Team All-American; Jim Kane, Northern California Amateur Champion who recently won the Oklahoma State Championship and Broadmoor Invitational Championship; and Tom Culligan III, former Northern California Amateur Champion.

Nathaniel Crosby, who heads the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, is expected to compete as are John Brodie, former professional golfer and quarterback for the San Francisco '49ers football team, who has returned to amateur status; Bryon Pini of Santa Cruz, two-time Northern California Amateur champion; and Graham Cowan of Pacific Grove, who will compete following successful matches at the British Amateur Championship.

Spectators are welcome to attend. No entry fee will be charged although the $4 gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

Master flutist played 'deliciously'

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

FLUTIST WILLIAM BENNETT is twice gifted.

Not only do his technique and musicianship produce the most ephemeral and effortless sighs and songs but his humorous and even mischievous personality turns a concert into an entertainment of charm and engaging delight.

At least that's what happened last Thursday at Sunset Theater.

Bennett was on the Peninsula for a week-long master class at Asilomar sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Community School of Music. By the time of the Carmel concert, Bennett was nearing the end of his tenure here and the rigors of his schedule seemed to touch his playing with a brief and almost unnoticed fatigue. With some 60 students, the class itself was more than sufficiently successful to stir talk of a repeat next

With an outstanding accompanist, Clifford Benson, Bennett began his concert with the Sonata No. 6 in E, BWV 1035 (No. 7 if your count includes the early Sonata in G Minor, BWV 1020), a four-movement piece that includes a slightly grave siciliano.

Bennett's forward tone production stamped the work with an unusual authority and his phrasing was tastefully understated. The dialogue between players was subtle and the results lovely.

Joueurs de Flute by Albert Roussel was a delightful fourway representation of legendary flutists of fame. Tityre, a Roman demigod, was animated whimsy. Krishna was seductive to a 7/8 meter while his tunes more than a little resembled the style of Ravel, and M'de la Pejaudie, a wealth and penchant for pretty girls, was a gentle and impulsive choreogram.

Delicious playing also realized the Sonatine of 1943-by Henri Dutilleux, an eminent contemporary who is enjoying increasing attention by orchestras. A tender and easy first section gave rise to a solemn declamation for both flute and piano. The animated finale featured a solo flute cadenza. This work reflected also the influence of Ravel, and Poulenc.

From the same year was the Flute Sonata by Prokofiev, one of the most popular works of its type in 20th century literature. It is the work's first two movements that are the most engaging. The moderato contains echos of Romeo and

Arts & Leisure

Juliet and the scherzo is a jewel with many facets and colors. The last two movements seem to be in a different style, more rational and private, except that the finale is a tour de force of rapid passage work that really works the pianist.

Bennett seemed tried by the piece. His tone grew a bit coarse, even choked, in spots, and the edge of his rhythm blurred a couple of times. More than these things, though, was the impression that fatigue had touched his concentration. He did not argue the sonata's intensity with complete success, and the brilliance of his pianist tilted the focus to the keyboard.

Of course the work itself favors the piano, but the Bennett replaced the last named selection with the Grand Polonaise, Op. 16 by Theobald Boehm, the father of the modern flute and its technique. This romp was of course a high moment of the evening, with all stops out, and it electrified the substantial audience and brought on a flurry of encores that were pure popcorn. These latter were transcriptions from the violin show-off repertoire of Ries, Drdla, Kreisler and Damare.

The Damare piece, Nightingale at the Opera, was played with breathtaking brilliance on the piccolo and capped an excursion of charms with a pun of humor.

SPEAKING OF POPCORN, the Hidden Valley Musical Theater has opened You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown. Clark Gesner wrote the book, lyrics and music for this Peanuts-inspired review that won awards and sell-out audiences off-Broadway after it opened in 1967.

Gesner skillfully reflected the character of the comic strip, with Charlie Brown's day-to-day concerns and doubts enhanced by the greater poignancy of a living realization.

Fred Weiss' creation attends to the show with sensible directness, Jim Carrocio's scenery also complements and Mark Watters' band plays with taste and fine style.

The actors and characters were well matched and in good balance to one another. Jon Gruett was an often disappointed but never tragic Charlie Brown. Mary Jean Brady was relentlessly Lucy. Deborah Pierce was a yummy Patty. Mark Johnston was the pianist and generally superior Schroeder. Kim Mowrey was an almost too forceful Linus (complete with blanket) and Snoopy was excellently done by Rich Cameron.

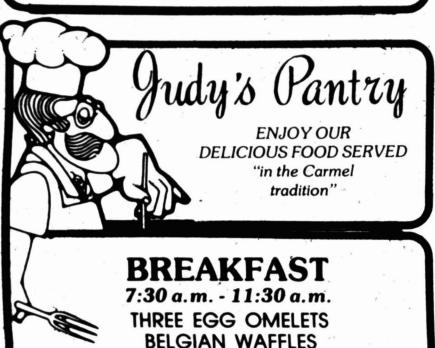

There are lots of delightful moments in the show, (though it could move along a bit more quickly) and through much of it the moments are self-acualizing vignettes. The music is inconsequential except for Snoopy's caberet-style paean to Suppertime and the final paean number, Happiness. Come to think of it, that music is inconsequential too, but it is all fun and with a G rating.

You can buy wine, juice, cheese and crackers to accompany your appearance, but no popcorn.

-Father Farrell's Wisdom

Monterey Peninsula deserves good leadership

By the REV. LARRY FARRELL

We ask thy blessing on the Monterey Peninsula as we begin the 210th year of our history. The venerable Padre Junipero Serra, the saintly Mallorquin Franciscan, together with the brave and patient Catalan conquistador Don Gaspar de Portola, founded this capital city of Alta and Baja California and placed her under God's loving protection, for they knew they could accomplish nothing without his divine providence and guidance.

Give us the grace, O Lord, to follow their example. This is the 72nd annual dinner meeting of the chamber. I also arrived in Monterey 72 years ago and tonight, publicly, we both thank thee, O Lord, for allowing us to survive and flourish these many years.

O Lord, continue to keep us both in the hollow of thy hand. The purpose of this organization is to produce leaders worthy of the beauty and charm of the Monterey Peninsula. We meet tonight in a refurbished area of a lower Alvarado Street, and as Pelon would say to his cronies of Tortilla Flat: "Carramba Maggi y aye Chichuahua. You paisanos have come a long way in the last 72 years."

O Lord with thy help, we shall go a lot farther.

Students to give concert of choral music Sunday

Wine and history mingle in Spain's mountain vineyards

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

LOGRONO, SPAIN—This is our second visit to the Rioja, Spain's finest region of table wine production.

It is a land of storybook beauty. The Rio Ebro flows gently between vineyard and tree-lined banks, of graceful bends and turns through craggy hills capped with cathedrals, ancient half-timbered houses clustered protectively around them on narrow cobbled streets. Villages like Samaniego, Laguardia and Briones keep to patterns centuries old, their olive groves and vineyards in random plots outside of the people garrisons. Other times and other ways seem easily not too far back in time.

The Latinization of Spain began when the Romans drove the Carthaginians out of this land during the Second Punic War in the second century B.C. Vineyards were already widespread; enormous amounts of wine were commandeered as tribute for Roman cellars and tables. In the heyday of the empire, it has been estimated that more than 20 million amphoras of Spanish wine were shipped to Rome. Just behind the British cemetery in that city today is an artificial hill called Monte Testaccio, composed of little more than the eroded remains of broken amphoras from the nearby shipping docks of the Tiber, once upon a time a navigable highway to the sea.

AFTER THE PLUNDER of the Barbarians came the Moors, in the eighth century. The Christian reconquest ended with the last battle skirmishes on the Andalusian coast, in sherryland—Jerez de la Frontera—Ferdinand and Isabella's frontier in the 15th century—containing the riverport city of Sanlucar from where Columbus set sail on his voyage of discovery.

From the 15th century until the 18th, Spain was a world power as we all well know, particularly Californians, who daily drive the straightened-out route of the King's Highway, El Camino Real, between San Diego and San Francisco.

When the plague of Phylloxera devastated the vineyards of Europe in the last quarter of the 19th century, it did not reach immediately into Spain. Emigres from France poured in steady streams over the Pyrenees to work at the only thing they knew, winemaking. Europe was forced to lean on Spain for most of its table wine. Not since the early Roman days had there been such demand and growth for the wines of every region.

The best, even then, were the wines from the vineyards just below the French border, flanking the bends of the River Ebro. At its western point, near Haro, it is joined by a small tributary, the Rio Oja, which, in contraction to Rioja, names the area.

Pride in the quality of their wines moved the Riojans to one of the earliest trademarks of wine in history. It took the form of a kind of anagram brand which could be burned into casks designating Rioja origin.

The celebrated trademark, adopted in 1560, founded the first trade association in Spain. To further protect the authenticity of their bottlings, some leading shippers encased their bottles in a wire mesh with a lead seal on the bottom as protection against adulteration or refilling. Better bottles of reserva Riojas still come to market in that wire mesh binding dating back 400 years.

There are no great wine estates here, as in Bordeaux. Between the protective clusters of the small villages and larger towns, wine centers like Haro and Ollauri, and Logrono, the new vinous capital, are the gnarled old vine plots, black-silhouetted in head-pruned, goblet tradition against a light clay, rock-stubble soil.

Famed shippers buy grapes and wines from local peasant farmers, and their co-ops in each of three separate areas—Rioja Alta, Rioja Alavesa and Rioja Baja.

The softest and finest wines come from the first two mentioned regions. The terrain is higher, almost 1,500 feet above sea level.

There is just enough rainfall in this benchland of the Sierra de Cantabria mountains forming the handsome backdrop which serves as a northern shield. Tempranillo is the leading red wine grape, with modest additions of Garnacha, sometimes said to be a clonal relation to the Grenache of France.

GRACIANO and Mazuelo are also cultivated for red wines.

The white wines of the Rioja, of growing new importance for the export market, are produced from Viura and Garnacha Blanca, with occasional Malvasia for fragrance and bouquet.

Seventy-five to 80 percent of the production is in red wine, the balance divided between white and a not inconsiderable amount of rosado, pink wine.

About 26.5 million gallons of wine are produced from slightly more than 125,000 acres of vines under the supervision of the Consejo Regulador de la Denominacion de Origen Rioja y Bodegas Cooperatives. There are 40 bodegas (wineries) in the membership of growers and shippers, Criadores Exportadores de Vinos Rioja. On this visit, as their guests, we would visit nine bodegas in three days, and have the opportunity to taste the wines of all the leading shippers.

Time has not stood still here. The competition of the world wine market has moved the leading producers to break out of the patterns of tradition. Two new impressive bodegas and vineyards, with multi-million dollar investment, of the Olarra steel dynasty of Bilbao and Domecq, of Jerez de la Frontera, have established exciting new standards of production and excellence. The price range is right on target for the volume market in the United States, $3 to $5 a bottle.

In my next column, I'll highlight my tasting experience in Spain, with the hope you'll be able to find the best of discoveries in your on marketplace.

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

SHORT MOVE FIRST

You, White, roll 6-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

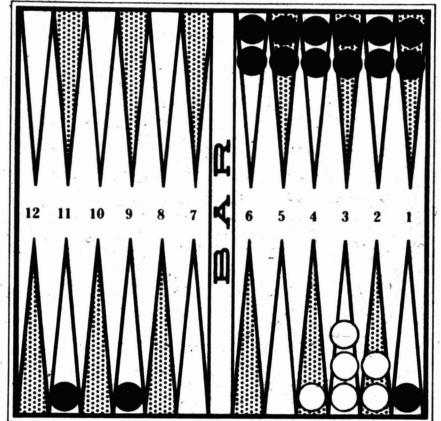

A fast player takes the six by bearing a man off the 4point; and he then looks for a safe four. He must leave a blot on his 1-point or his 2-point.

The cautious player doesn't leave a blot. He moves the two before he takes the six. That is, he moves first from the 4point to the 2-point. Then he takes the six by bearing a man off the 3-point.

White may eventually have to leave a blot, but it is foolish to leave a blot unnecessarily.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

JILL HILL is the lovely Bianca, pursued by many eligible bachelors yet unable to marry until her older sister chooses a suitor in William Shakespeare's ribald comedy The Taming of the Shrew opening Friday, June 27 at the Hartnell College Studio Theatre, Salinas. Miss Hill will join the Actors Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco following her stint with the Hartnell's Western Stage repertory season.

'Taming of the Shrew' to open in Salinas

William Shakespeare's ribald and robust play, The Taming of the Shrew, about the romancing and subjugation of a hot-blooded and beautiful woman, will be staged for opening performances Friday, June 27 at the Hartnell Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

First produced in late 16th century London at the Globe Theatre, the comedy has been adapted for contemporary audiences. The romantic Spanish era of California is brought to life as Petruchio becomes a lusty Don Juan and Kate a scheming senorita. The foray into the age-old battle of the sexes remains the same, unchanged since the Bard first penned the tale.

Directed by William Wolak, The Taming of the Shrew stars Matt McKenzie and Annie Combs as the battling lovers; Jeff Hudelson as Baptista Minolo; Jill Hill portrays Bianca, Baptista's younger daughter, pursued by many; and Gremio, an old merchant of Monterey and suitor of Bianca is Robert Frederick Adams.

Additional performances are scheduled June 28, July 1-5, 17-18, 20 and 29 and Aug. 5 with 2:30 matinees planned June 29, July 6 and 13.

Admission is $5.50, Friday and Saturday; $4.50, Tuesday through Thursday and $3.50 on Sunday.

For reservations, phone (408) 758-1221.

African handicrafts exhibit opens Monday

Decorative Arts of West Africa is the theme of an exhibit of handicrafts by the primitive societies of that continent opening Monday, June 30 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel.

A collection of 70 items will be displayed including basketry and bags, wooden pieces, textiles, calabashes, personal adornment and musical instruments as well as pottery, brass and horn. Two dance costumes complete the selection. Most of the material has been used by the people of Carmeroon grasslands, Nigeria, Upper Volta, Togo, Ivory Coast, Mali, Ghana, Dahomey and Sierra Leone.

Though many of the items are new, the design and execution of the works date back centuries.

A 28-inch Bamilke palm wine jug is a ceremonial piece beaded in red, white, green and blue.

The exhibit is being circulated nationally by Van Arsdale Associates of Winter Park, Fla.

The works may be viewed through July 24 from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

FREE WANTADS

For subscribers to the Carmel Pine Cone

A SPECIAL OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is happy to be here and we always look forward to meeting our subscribers. As a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a FREE WANT AD every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by 5 p.m. Monday (no phone ads, please). d to 16 words. The Pine Cone is not errors in free ads. Limit is one ad per subscriber per week. To run the same ad the following week, a new and on a new form must be submitted. Publisher reserves the right to refuse any free ad for any reason. Free ads must be placed in the following classifications: Antiques, Autos for Sale, Boats for Sale, Lost & Found, Misc. for Sale, Pets & Livestock, Special Notices, Wanted, Yard Sales

OCEAN VIEW MEDITERRANEAN ESTATE IN PEBBLE BEACH

Reminiscent of the grandeur of the 1920s when it was created by renowned architect Addison Mizner, this landmark estate of palatial proportions and beauty is situated on 11/2 acres of prime Pebble Beach property and commands breathtaking views of Carmel Bay, Pt. Lobos and the ocean. Exuding old-world charm, the arched feudal entry leads into an impressive loggia with imported carved pillars, overlooking terraced gardens and sea and hill vistas beyond. Superb for elegant entertaining, the stately 6,000 sq. ft. residence features a ballroom-size living room with high, open-beam ceiling and handmade Italian tiles, and a banquet-size dining room with fireplace. The more informal wing of the estate includes a distinctive bedroom with marble fireplace, a handsome master bedroom suite with two fireplaces, adjoining library and a bath highlighted by tiled Roman tub and jacuzzi. Tucked away up a winding, tiled staircase is a third private bedroom and adjoining bath with fireplace. In a separate upstairs area, a suite of rooms could be used as an exceptional office suite, complete with spectacular view. This extraordinary property is offered at $975,000. ROCKY CREEK RANCH— BREATH-TAKING VIEWS—OVER 600 ACRES, SOUTH OF CARMEL

On a clear day you can see forever (almost). The ocean view goes north past Santa Cruz! There are fine, closer ocean views of Bixby Creek Bridge and Division Knoll, and beautiful views of the mountains all around. A good poriton of the property is either almost flat or gently sloping; some of it is quite steep. The vegetation is outstanding-groves of Redwoods, huge Oak trees, areas of Chaparral, Madrone, Manzanita and Greese Wood. Rocky Creek touches one corner of the property. There are perhaps dozens of large, practical level building sites on this magnificent acreage, one being an over 100-acre meadow. All this and much, much more is yours for $2,000,000. The owner will finance with terms open to negotiation.

COUNCIL SAYS NO TO ANNEXATION

At Wednesday night's council meeting next week, the residents of the Walker Tract will get their long-awaited official answer—no. For six months they have been asking the council for permission to circulate an annexation petition so that their four-block, heavily built-up residence area could become a part of incorporated Carmel.

Carmel Woods, to the north, also has a petition drawn up, ready to circulate, awaiting only the council's policy decision. Annexation-minded residents of Carmel Point and upper Hatton Fields have also been waiting to see what the council would say to Walker before going to work in their areas.
